House Approves Temporary Ban On Sale of Arms

Final Passage Assured as Senate Agrees to Vote Today.

Measure Provides For U. S. Neutrality

Britain Swings Defense Machine Into Action as Crisis Grows.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

Final passage of the neutrality resolution was certain as the House, under a "gag" rule, approved a temporary arms embargo.

A government spokesman in Paris indicated a break in "The Stresa front" was likely.

Great Britain ordered its defense forces to protect her African colonies.

Emperor Haile Selassie offered to sell his province of Aussa to Mussolini in an effort to avert war.

Il Duce defended his actions in an interview in Rome.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Neutrality legislation containing a six-month mandatory arms embargo, designed to keep this country out of any conflicts resulting from the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, last night was assured when the Senate agreed to vote at 11 a. m. today on the measure as it passed the House several hours earlier.

Comparatively brief but spirited debate preceded the House's swift and overwhelming approval of the neutrality resolution passed Wednesday by the Senate, but amended to limit the mandatory arms embargo until February 29, next year.

It was this amendment, demanded by the Administration before it would agree to the legislation, which necessitated the return of the measure to the Senate. There the stage was all set to concur in the House amendment and speed the resolution to the President until Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, announced he wished to make a lengthy speech on the subject.

Filibuster Blocked.

Rather than slow down the legislative pace of the Senate last night the leaders proposed and obtained an unanimous consent agreement to take the matter up at 10 a. m. today, with debate limited to one hour. This agreement makes impossible a filibuster against the resolution and Senate sentiment makes certain its adoption—the first neutrality legislation enacted by the United States since 1917.

Forebodings that the legislation will prove ineffective in keeping the country out of war, if it does not plunge the country into conflict, were expressed on both sides of the Capitol. Not until yesterday was any expression given to the thought that certain types of neutrality might bring on a war which might otherwise be prevented.

But these warnings on House and Senate floor, directed at the mandatory provisions which was contended would tie the President's hands in making any move to prevent war or assist a weak nation against a strong one, had no effect and probably will not.

Johnson objected to the rapid ratification of the House change with the words that the resolution "can not and will not prevent any wars in the future."

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, usually found among the isolationists, objected to the mandatory feature, asserting the matter should be left to the President's discretion until Congress reconvenes. Lewis added the resolution was an announcement to the world that this Government had been placed in "a strait jacket."

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, leader of the Senate anti-war profits and neutrality bloc, said he objected strenuously to the time limitation, but that he would not press his point in the hope it would be corrected before the mandate expired. So much was said in the Senate before the matter was laid over until today.

Thunder of Yeas.

During the House debate Chairman Sam D. McReynolds of that body's Foreign Affairs Committee sharply denounced the mandatory

Il Duce Warns World Powers Can't Stop Italy

Ready to Quit League if Necessary to Achieve Aims in Africa.

The following exclusive interview with Premier Benito Mussolini was given Ed. L. Keen, European vice president of the United Press, whose journalistic feats in Europe have been famous since before the war.

Rome, Aug. 23.—"A solution of the Ethiopian problem must be something radical and conclusive," Premier Benito Mussolini declared today.

"Ethiopia cannot continue as a weapon—a modern weapon, not an ancient lance—pointed at Italy's back."

With these words, spoken deliberately and with flashing eyes, Il Duce, on the eve of his departure for northern Italy to attend the most exhaustive military maneuvers since the World war, concluded an hour's interview, in which he discussed with much frankness Italy's position in East Africa, her motives and aims, and justifications for her course of action.

It was the first detailed newspaper interview he has granted since the Abyssinian situation became acute.

Deeply bronzed, he is the picture of perfect health and bounding vitality. When I remarked on his cheerful appearance in the face of such compelling problems as the peace of the world and Italian-Abyssinian relations, he put his hands high, threw back his head, and said:

"In my spirit at this moment lies my strength."

When I told him the object of my visit to Rome was to obtain first-hand information concerning Italy's purposes and the reasons for them, about which the world at large, and particularly America, is puzzled and, to a considerable degree, critical, Mussolini said:

"For the past 40 years Ethiopia has been hostile toward Italy. In order to avoid friction, we tried to come to an understanding with her and in 1928 we signed a treaty of friendship which she has since consistently disregarded.

"The situation has become worse and worse. She has attacked our soldiers, killed our officials and

Senate Test Set on 12 Ct. Cotton Loan

Southern Bloc Seeks to Jam Through Rider Killing Subsidy.

Filibuster Tactics Force Action Today; Breach Charged to AAA.

By Felix Bruner.

Determined to set aside the AAA cotton loan-subsidy plan, a group of Southern Senators, led by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, will attempt to force through the Senate today an amendment to the third deficiency appropriation bill making mandatory a 12-cent cotton loan.

Using filibuster tactics, Senator Byrnes last night forced agreement to consider a motion today to suspend the rules and consider his amendment. The agreement was reached after Byrnes threatened to talk all night.

Immediate consideration of the amendment was blocked by Senator Hale (Republican), Maine, who objected that legislation could not be attached to an appropriation bill without suspension of the rules. A two-thirds vote is necessary for this.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, served notice that he would ask for suspension of the rules to consider amendments providing loans of 40 cents a pound on wool and 15 cents a pound on copper.

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, in a statement yesterday, declared that a definite promise that a 12-cent loan would be ordered had been broken.

Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, author of the Administration cotton legislation, in a statement urged farmers to hold their cotton for 12 cents or better.

Meanwhile, the cotton market broke sharply as a result of the announcement that the loan would be cut to 9 cents, while farmers would, through a subsidy, be guaranteed an average of 12 cents a pound for the current crop.

Davis Defends Policy.

Chester A. Davis, AAA administrator, defended the new plan. He said the program would not only guarantee the best cotton income the South has enjoyed for years, but that it would result in an enlarged outlet for cotton exports. He said he was sure that when farmers understood the plan they would rush to sell their cotton. He said there would be plenty of time to study the market.

Meanwhile, it was announced that Government cotton pool operations had been suspended to allow traders and others interested to get a better view of the market situation. Traders in some instances were badly squeezed as a result of making future commitments on the basis of the expected 12-cent loan.

Senator Smith predicted that the price would drop to 9 cents. Cotton in New York closed yesterday at slightly more than 10½ cents, a drop of about $4 a bale. Under the new plan, every cent drop in the average price of cotton between September 1 and January 1 will cost the Government approximately $50,000,000 in subsidy payments, if this year's crop is moved between those periods.

Senator Smith did not say who had promised the 12-cent loan.

"Promise was unequivocally made," he said, "that if the Bankhead act was extended, the 12-cent loan would be renewed. Senator George, of Georgia, and Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, were both present when this statement was made.

Sees Agreement Broken.

"I think that this announcement as set forth in the press, which I take to be correct, ends any further co-operation in the form of agreements between the cotton growers and the Government.

Smith declared that the loan announced by the AAA "is not a loan at all." He said that presumably any part of the 10,500,000 bales of cotton produced under the Bankhead limitations not disposed of before January 1 would not benefit from the subsidy.

"Therefore," he said, "the trade is being thoroughly advised that 10,-

SANTO DOMINGO.

One Calm Afternoon.

THE afternoon of August 29, 1916, was calm and cloudless in the port of Santo Domingo. The U. S. S. Memphis, sleek and fast 20,000-ton cruiser, swayed at anchor near the small gunboat Castine. Sailors lolled under the awnings, awaiting any word that would send them to protect American nationals in the then turbulent country. Steam pressure had been allowed to run on in the Memphis. At 3:45 p. m., the waters of the harbor began to swell and great waves hove into the warship. An undersea earthquake shook the waters of the harbor. The Memphis dragged her anchors and drifted toward the shore. Orders were given to get up steam so that she could fight her way out of the harbor. A steam pipe burst in the boiler room and four men were scalded to death. The vessel went ashore 200 yards off the beach in the harbor at 5:10 o'clock, at a point as conspicuous as the Battery in the harbor of New York. Forty-one lives were lost and 80 persons injured. So, for 19 years the skeleton of the Memphis, a mass of twisted and rusty steel, has been on exhibition in the harbor of Santo Domingo, a reproach to the United States Government and the theme of all agitators in the West Indies. Now it is to be removed at the expense of the Dominican Republic through the co-operation of President Trujillo of that country and President Roosevelt, brought about by William E. Pulliam, receiver general of customs in the Dominican Republic, who returned to his post of duty on the Puerto Rican liner Borinquen day before yesterday, carrying tenders from two or more New York concerns for the final and complete demolition of the wreck.

MATTITUCK, N. Y.

Meet the Tuthills.

THE Tuthill tribe has taken Mattituck. A thousand Tuthills toured from all parts of the country into this little Long Island town to talk of John Tuthill, founder of the Tuthill tribe in America, on the 300th anniversary of his birth. Tuthill committees investigated Tuthill backgrounds; Tuthill baseball teams played other Tuthill teams in the Tuthill baseball league, and the Tuthills were invariably trounced or triumphant. Last names were universally dispensed with in introductions. A big camera trundled on a truck took tintypes of the Tuthills, recording Tuthilliana for Tuthill posterity. Most Tuthill girls are blonde, and a considerable percentage pretty, it developed—to the evident pleasure of young men of the genus Tuthill. "They do say," tremoloed Fred Tuthill, 83, "that no Tuthill has ever been in jail—but that takes in a lot of territory." The chief speaker at the reunion was John S. Tuthill, of Waterloo, Iowa, son of Judge William H. Tuthill, of Tipton, Iowa, who engineered the last Tuthill roundup in 1887.

Moley Action Up at Inquiry On Lobbying

Senate Witness States 'Brain Truster' Met Ship Officials.

Latter Admits Joining in Talk on Subsidy Bill, Says 'What of It?'

By the Associated Press.

Raymond Moley, first head of the "brain trust," was brought suddenly into the Senate lobby investigation yesterday when the committee switched from public utilities to ship subsidy legislation.

Ira A. Campbell, counsel for shipping interests, described a luncheon session in New York last week to discuss the ship subsidy bill, attended by John M. Franklin, Kermit Roosevelt and "Mr. Moley."

"What Mr. Moley?" Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, asked quickly.

"Mr. Raymond Moley; that's all I know about him," the witness replied while spectators chuckled.

He then told of a second meeting this week in a room at the Capitol. Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, in charge of the ship subsidy legislation as chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, was there, he said.

Line Officials There.

Also present were Stanley Dollar, of the Dollar Lines; W. K. Jackson, of the United Fruit Co., and Robert Patchin, of the Grace Line.

"Did you discuss the bill?" Black asked of the New York meeting.

"We discussed one provision."

"What was that?"

"The provision taking away from the courts jurisdiction over the fixing of compensation for the cancellation of mail contracts."

"What, was there a provision like that in the bill?" Black asked.

It developed through further questioning that the provision barred the courts from granting compensation for possible future profits from the mail contracts.

The committee went into efforts to shape the subsidy legislation, now dead for this session, after laying aside for a time its investigation of lobbying against the public utilities bill.

Plot to Defraud U. S.

It excused Howard C. Hopson subject to call, after Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, digging into the financial past of the Associated Gas & Electric System, charged him with having conducted a $27,000,000 "wash sale" of the company's stock to lure the general public into buying.

Schwellenbach traced 464,000 shares from a subsidiary company through a series of brokers and back to another subsidiary, the price meanwhile increasing from $60 to $68. During the same period the company was busy, Hopson agreed, selling additional issues of the same stock to the public.

Tydings Indignant.

Heated denials and persistent questions were given a lively interruption by the sudden and dramatic appearance of Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, indignant at testimony yesterday that he had attended a party given by Hopson's representative in the fight against the public utilities bill.

Bernard B. Robinson, Chicago broker, was abruptly recalled to the stand. His statement that he "thought" Tydings was one of the guests was read to him. Tydings took up the questioning himself and drew from Robinson an admission that his statement was

Farm and Coal Bills Go to Roosevelt; FACA, Gold Suit Ban Salvaged

John G. Winant, Republican, Heads Social Security Board

Former Governor of New Hampshire, He Welcomes Appointment.

A Republican, former Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, was chosen by President Roosevelt yesterday to head the new huge social security organization.

Two Democrats also were named to complete the three-man social insurance board: Arthur J. Altmyer, of Wisconsin, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Vincent Morgan Miles, of Arkansas, lawyer and former member of the Democratic national committee.

Winant is in Europe and will not return until September 11 and only preliminary work is expected to be undertaken before then.

It is expected that the new agency will be one of the largest in Washington with perhaps 5,000 employes of its own in addition to a similar number engaged in handling taxes provided for under the social security act, a total of 10,000 persons.

Inasmuch as the contributory pension features of the act do not become operative until January 1, 1937, the organization will develop gradually.

Winant was named for the longest term on the board, which will administer the law which President Roosevelt has referred to as the most important enacted by the present Congress. The three board members will receive a salary of $10,000 a year, will have the task of organizing and administering the new old-age pension and unemployment insurance plans.

Conference Differences Ironed Out in Rush to End Session.

Major Measures Sped by Houses

Cotton Filibuster Only Threat to Early Adjournment.

The House adjourned at 11:40 p. m. last night to resume at 10 this morning, but the Senate was still in session with a fight in progress against the $495,000,000 flood-control bill. A filibuster conducted by Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, was ended shortly before midnight.

By Robert C. Albright.

With every major conference disagreement ironed out in a last-minute drive, and with three additional bills on the way to the White House, Congress reeled around the last corner to adjournment last night at a breath-taking pace.

Congress neared tonight's scheduled finish line after a dizzy approval of bills ranging from the Guffey soft coal measure to the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium and taxes for the revised railroad retirement measure.

A determined fight by Southern cotton Senators to write 12-cent loans on cotton into mandatory law was the only cloud on the adjournment horizon.

Administration bills that had been given up as abandoned because of wide-open conference rifts, were patched up and salvaged in the rush to get away, and even the Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company measure, on the "death sentence" features of which the House capitulated Thursday, was reported in complete agreement.

Bills Salvaged.

Bills snatched from disaster in conference last night were:

1. The President's gold clause bill, debarring dollar devaluation suits against the Government. As compromised in conference, the bill now closes the courts to such suits after January 1, instead of at once, as in the House bill, or in six months, as in the Senate drafts. "Dollar for dollar" claims, that represented no attempt at enrichment because of dollar devaluation, would be sanctioned.

2. The FACA bill, extending Federal control of alcohol. As adjusted in conference, this prohibits bulk sales of liquor, ensconces the new control agency as a Treasury department division, and provides Federal regulation of beer and brewers only so far as they are now provided in dry or semi-dry States.

Filibuster Averted.

A threatened filibuster on extension of existing ocean mail contracts was averted, when the Senate recalled by unanimous consent a resolution it had previously approved in the absence of Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama.

It was a resolution by Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, offered in lieu of the Administration's ship subsidy bill which was caught in the adjournment jam. Present contracts expire in October, and the Copeland resolution would have extended the President's authority to continue them until April 30.

Black hastily returned to the floor, and demanded reconsideration. He pointed out alleged abuses under the existing mail contract system, which he had uncovered in his shipping investigation, and, aided by Huey Long, he sought approval of his alternate resolution flatly cancelling all ocean mail contracts next March 31.

Black Fight Futile.

But Black's fight was futile. The Senate rejected his resolution, 27 to 37, then again approved the Copeland resolution it had previously adopted, this time by a 44-to-20 roll call vote.

Conference agreement on the utility holding company bill followed weeks of apparently hopeless deadlock, broken only when the House Thursday agreed to accept a "compromise" altering the form of the "death sentence."

"It doesn't go as far as I would like," said Senator Burton K.

Farmer Slain At Home Near Falls Church

Aged Man's Head Crushed in Desperate Struggle; Posse Hunts Killer.

His head battered by stones and his house ransacked, Truman Brush, 75-year-old farmer, was found murdered on his estate near Falls Church late last night.

The aged man's body was found by Hugh Hummer, also of Falls Church, a friend of many years. Sheriff Eppie Kirby said indications were that the killer had entered through the rear of the house and struck Brush with the stones when he offered resistance. Brush had been ill for several months and Hummer was bringing medicines when he found the body.

Brush lived a mile the other side of the Virginia town. The nearest house is nearly a quarter of a mile away.

Dr. C. M. Ransom, Falls Church coroner, issued a death certificate of "murder at the hands of a person or persons unknown."

That there had been a terrific struggle prior to the murder of the old man was indicated by the general condition of the house. Tables and chairs had been overturned and furniture broken.

Several scraps of cloth, believed to have been torn from the killer's garments during the struggle, were found by police.

Shortly before midnight, police enlisted the aid of bloodhounds and organized a posse to track down the killer.

No direct motive could be advanced by police. Although Brush kept pretty much to himself, he was liked by everyone who knew him. As he was known to have lost everything but his property several years ago, the robbery motive was discarded.

The dead man was the member

U. S. Planning New Housing In City Areas

Tugwell Project Would Move 30,000 Families to Suburbs.

Plans for transplanting more than 30,000 families from congested city areas into suburban apartment houses are being completed by the Rural Resettlement Division under direction of Undersecretary Tugwell, it was learned yesterday. The division is expected to ask soon for an allotment from Federal works funds to finance the plan.

The program is based on a survey just completed in more than 20 cities. While the names of the cities are carefully guarded to prevent speculation in land which the Government expects to buy, it is known that these comprise two groups. In the first are 10 or 12 of the largest cities and in the second are an equal number of middle-sized cities.

The new plan, which is authorized under the works relief act, will be purely a housing project with no arrangements for subsistence or elaborate community development such as is being attempted in connection with subsistence homesteads. The Tugwell plan will differ from that under way by the Housing Division of the Public Works Administration in that instead of physically replacing undesirable housing within cities, it will seek to make suburban housing so desirable that tenants of slum districts will move into new homes provided by the Government.

For the most part, the new housing will be in the nature of large-scale apartment buildings. The developments adjacent to the larger cities are expected to house from 1,800 to 3,000 families. Those near smaller cities will house from 800 to 1,500 families. The larger developments, it was said, are expect-

House Group Criticizes General For 'Jokers' in Army Contracts

Military Committee Here Sees Plot to Defraud U. S. in Truck Awards; Maj. Gen. Bash, Col Seaman, Silverman Named in Report.

By the Associated Press.

Charging discrimination and favoritism in connection with Army motor truck orders, the House Military Committee yesterday lashed at Maj. Gen. Louis H. Bash, Army quartermaster general, because of "jokers" in the truck specifications.

"Any jokers found in any of the specifications," the committee said, "were inserted after 'directives' had been received from the office of the quartermaster general of the Army."

In a formal report to the House, the Military Committee, which for months has been pounding at the War Department, said:

"Either the quartermaster general of the Army does not know the meaning of the word 'joker,' or else he is not familiar with what is going on in his own department."

Gen. Bash was not in Washington yesterday and made no immediate reply to the committee's criticism.

The report hit also at Col. A. O. Seaman of the National Guard Bureau, asserting that changes in specifications which barred Dodge trucks and favored Chevrolets were suggested by him in a letter to the quartermaster general.

Turning to already published testimony concerning Joseph Silverman, jr., merchandiser of excess Army supplies, the committee asserted there was evidence of a "plot to defraud the United States" in connection with a truck order and that it would be called to the attention of the Attorney General.

After handing in a freshly printed report on its long inquiry into War Department business transactions, the committee mapped new plans which members said were designed to purge the department of questionable business deals.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, said a special sub-committee would renew the investigation, probably in mid-September.

Gen. Bash, who was the target for much of the report's criticism, is a native of Illinois. He graduated from West Point in 1895.

Gen. Bash was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for services during the World War and also has been decorated with the Silver Star for gallantry in action.

After serving in the Infantry, he transferred to the Quartermaster Corps, and in August, 1929, was named assistant to the quartermaster general with the rank of brigadier general.

He served again as assistant to the quartermaster general in 1933, and was promoted to the temporary rank of major general when he

Japanese Hold American Ship, Hunt Two Suspected as Spies

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 23.—Japanese authorities, alert for espionage, detained an American freighter tonight and sought two American youths said by police to have taken photographs of a fortified zone from the ship.

After naval planes joined in a wide hunt for a "mysterious foreign vessel," it was detained by gendarmes at Port Tokyama, in Yamaguchi Prefecture, said Reno (Japanese) News Agency dispatches.

The ship was the steamship Golden Mountain, out of San Francisco. Its officers and crew were said to be undergoing a rigid examination by military authorities.

Police attempted to trace two young Americans they suspected of having taken photographs of the fortified zone from the freighter and then having left the ship at Tokyama and started for Kobe by train.

Their names, which possibly were garbled in dispatches from Port Tokyama, were given as Phillip Maas, a graduate of Stanford University, and William Felix. They were reported to be returning to the United States from Lingnan University, Canton, China.

The Rengo report said the vessel was seen late yesterday in the Bungo Straits, between the islands of Kyushu and Shikoku, in a forbidden fortified zone.

Millitary authorities thought the ship was in distress and sent a boat to investigate. The investigators said they found persons on the freighter photographing the shoreline. While the boat returned to shore for instructions, Rengo said, the freighter sailed away.

Instructions were broadcast to all nearby ports to detain the vessel. Airplanes from the Saeki naval air base joined the search. The Golden Mountain was overtaken this morning and ordered to put into Tokyama for examination.

Fleet Home From War Games; 416 Navy Planes Thrill Coast

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 23.—The air was filled with fighting planes today as the Navy staged its greatest sky and sea parade in behalf of young America.

Visibility was 20 miles, compared with 500 yards on June 10, when the last show was put on, mostly unseen.

There were 416 planes in the air. A big man was in a glistening white scouting plane, with three stars, that led the mass flight. Well over 6 feet in height, his rank is the highest commanding naval air forces, and he is the distinguished veteran of three wars—Vice Admiral Henry V. Butler.

The big show of five V-shaped wings of naval air fighters was put on chiefly for children, more than 10,000 being invited to the Army and Navy posts at the entrance of the harbor here to witness it.

At the same time the fleet came in, parading down the coast to the harbor entrance. There were more than 20 fighting ships in line.

First came the big dreadnaughts, then heavy cruisers, light cruisers, destroyers, aircraft carriers and submarines.

The air show got under way shortly before noon. With roars of the catapult guns, the seaplanes shot from the battleships and cruisers. From two to four planes were shot from each ship.

Down near the end of the sea parade there arose from the two giant carriers, Saratoga and Ranger, squadrons of land-geared planes like [illegible]s of birds.

At the air station just across the bay from San Diego, hordes of planes rose from the carrier Lexington, followed by the fighting planes of the Marines. From the still water of the bay adjoining the naval air station the giant naval patrol seaplanes lifted gracefully.

Utility Expert Named to Fill SEC Vacancy

Roosevelt Picks Ross, Head of Seattle System, as Pecora Successor.

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed an electric utilities expert as a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, to fill a long-standing vacancy created by the resignation of Ferdinand Pecora to accept a New York judgeship.

The new SEC member is J. D. Ross, of Washington State, an electrical engineer and for 20 years head of the Seattle municipal electric system.

This appointment was taken to indicate that the President has no intention of relaxing Government scrutiny of concerns in the public utility field under the new authority to be granted in the pending utilities bill, with its drastic holding company provision.

Headed Huge System.

The municipal power corporation headed by Ross is the outstanding system of its kind in the country. Under direction of the new SEC member, huge water-power facilities have been developed there. Ross has served under both Republican and Democratic administrations in his home city. He was described by members of Congress from Washington as a "New Dealer."

President Roosevelt, while Governor of New York, consulted with Ross in connection with the St. Lawrence waterways project. Ross also has worked with the Public Works Administration. He was born in Canada, but has spent most of his life in the United States.

Appointment of the Washington man came as something of a surprise to many persons who had predicted the appointment would go to Benjamin V. Cohen, general counsel for the National Power Policy Committee. Cohen has been active in behalf of utility holding company legislation. His presence in the holding company conference committee meetings recently resulted in strenuous objections from some of the members opposed to the President's legislation.

Gadsden Objects.

Meantime as the hour arrives in Congress for final enactment of the much-disputed utilities bill, Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, denounced the so-called compromise on section 11 of the pending measure as "simply the original death sentence in another form."

He said that the House, in accepting this provision after twice defeating the death sentence on previous occasions, had struck a blow at the millions of investors in utilities.

"The terrific pressure of the Government lobby, with its immense power over Federal patronage and Federal funds, apparently broke the will of a Congress tired and anxious to go home," Gadsden said.

Wallpaper Industry Urged to Use the Press

Newspaper advertising as the key to increased use of wallpaper was recommended to local dealers and manufacturers last night by Leonard C. Rennie, of the Wall Paper Institute. Concluding a national speaking campaign in major cities, he told the group at the Ambassador Hotel that the industry needs more active promotion and newspaper advertising, surveys had disclosed, was the best method.

Research by the institute revealed an increase of wallpaper sales, but the gain had not been in proportion to increases made by other industries. Advertising, Rennie declared, is necessary to spur more demand.

Rip-Panel Given Blame In Stratosphere Failure

A special board of survey, headed by Dr. Lyman P. Briggs, director of the Bureau of Standards, has decided failure of the rip-panel was the cause of the collapse of the National Geographic Society-Army Air Corps balloon, Explorer II, at Rapid City, S. Dak., July 12, the society announced yesterday.

In giving the verdict, the board stated that failure of the rip-panel is hitherto unknown in the history of manual balloons. Since the only serious damage to the big bag was above the upper catenary band, the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, which built the balloon, is reconstructing the entire top, thus putting the fabric in first-class condition.

Old Hatchet Is Buried

Farm Debt Bill, Guffey Measure Go to Roosevelt

House and Senate Work at Full Speed to End Long Session.

Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, "but on the whole it is the most comprehensive bill for regulations passed in one session of Congress."

The bill in general accomplishes the "death sentence" by requiring the Securities and Exchange Commission to eliminate all holding companies more than two degrees removed from its operating subsidiary, and forcing those remaining to operate in economically and geographically unified areas.

Under the agreement holding units are not permitted to organize mutual service units except where their contracts with operating companies provide for service at cost and without profit.

The Securities and Exchange Commission would be given absolute discretion in permitting holding companies to issue on physical assets only or against outstanding stock. This was a concession to the House, inasmuch as the Senate draft had limited such issues to physical property.

A House amendment exempting holding companies from Federal regulation of such of their activities as already are subject to State regulatory laws, was stricken by the conferees.

Financing, supervisory and construction operations of mutual service companies might be continued after April 1, 1936, if on a non-profit basis and subject to rules and regulations of the SEC. Costs of their services must be "equitably distributed" among all operating companies in an integrated system.

The SEC is given discretionary right to exempt holding companies from the provisions of the bill which exercised control only over the physical assets of operating electric companies in foreign countries, but this exemption would be denied if it was found "detrimental" to the operation of section II of the bill, carrying the "death sentence." This exemption was said to have been drawn for the exclusive benefit of the American and Foreign power corporation.

Single Control Impossible.

Senator Wheeler said the bill, in its ramifications, would make it impossible for Howard C. Hopson to continue his individual control of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. Hopson, faced with utility lobbying charges, has been appearing alternately between the Senate and House lobby investigating committees for the last two weeks.

Another of the conferees said that while more discretion had been granted to the SEC under the conference agreement, it was "constitutional discretion, safeguarded by definite standards."

The conference report on the Guffey coal bill, rendered yesterday after a hurried agreement, was whipped through the Senate and approved by the House by a 186-to-150 roll call vote, after a few anxious moments for leaders when the "noes" ran neck and neck with the "ayes."

The Guffey agreement retained the amendment by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, removing anti-trust law exemptions from coal operators who co-operate. Conferees also eliminated a provision which in effect would have given the United Mine Workers an exclusive labor voice on 23 district boards.

The Guffey measure, sought by the President to avert a threatened mine strike and as a constitutional test for similar legislation in the future, would set up a national bituminous coal commission to regulate the industry, and a national coal labor board to handle labor relations. Twenty-three district boards, on which labor and operators would be represented, and 14 minimum price areas would be established for price-fixing purposes. There would be a 15 per cent tax on coal at the mine, 90 per cent of which would be rebated to co-operating operators.

Farm Debt Bill.

The Frazier-Lemke farm debt bill (not the $3,000,000,000 inflationary farm mortgage refinancing measure), was slightly amended by the House after it passed the Senate. Whisked back to the Senate, the amendment was adopted, and the approved bill sent to the White House.

Under its terms, a farmer in distress could ask a court to adjudge him bankrupt. The court could invoke a three-month to three-year moratorium on his debts, during which the farmer would remain in possession of his property. Whatever rental payments the farmer made meanwhile above costs would be applied on his debts, although the creditors could apply for sale of his property at auction at any time.

Commented Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, whose last moratorium bill was invalidated by the Supreme Court:

"This bill is merely a step to make bankruptcy an instrument for conservation instead of destruction."

The railway tax measure approved yesterday by the Senate, after passing the House on Thursday, is a companion bill to the revised railway retirement law, re-enacted this session after an unfavorable Supreme Court decision.

It would impose a 3½ per cent tax on railroad pay rolls and another 3½ per cent on rail wages, to finance payment of retirements to rail workers over 65. The law previously enacted would have paid rail pensions out of the Treasury. The companion bill rushed through yesterday would pay taxes into the Treasury to bulwark this fund.

Tax Bill Remains.

The Administration's $250,000,000 wealth-taxing bill, the probable curtain raiser of the session, still remained to be acted on, but all conference differences on the measure are settled.

A small bloc of silver Senators plan to oppose its final approval until action is had on Senator Pat McCarran's bill to repeal the 50 per cent tax on profits from silver trading. The silver proviso was stricken out of the tax bill in conference, and McCarran is determined to push it through the Senate again in some form. Both McCarran and Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, have agreed not to oppose the tax report if the McCarran bill first passes the Senate.

In the zero-hour pressure, the House pressed to approval a resolution authorizing $150,000 for a Federal Trade Commission investigation of middlemen's profits, through a study of agricultural income and the economic condition of farmers generally. A letter from Budget Director D. W. Bell was produced, indicating that the authorization had the approval of the President.

Two bills tightening "safety at sea" requirements also were passed by the House. One, fixing the liability of ship owners at $60 a ton, previously had been approved by the Senate, and was sent to the White House. The other would reorganize the Department of Commerce Steamboat Inspection Service so it could deal more effectively with safety requirements.

Sisters, 7 and 8, Vote With Father in House

By the Associated Press.

Two little sisters in bright red dresses "voted" last night in the House.

They were Doralyn, 8, and Wilburta Cartwright, 7, daughters of Representative Cartwright (Democrat), Oklahoma.

They accompanied their father on the floor and when Speaker Byrns asked all in favor of considering an emigration bill to rise and be counted, they rose.

"Daddy stood up," Doralyn said. "So we did, too."

Court Rejects Suit to Recover Fees Paid NRA

Justice Levy of New York Rules Out Claims of Chicago Milliners.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 23.—Suit to recover NRA assessments of the Millinery Code Authority was dismissed today by Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy in a decision regarded as an important precedent.

His ruling, described by lawyers as the first of its kind since the United States Supreme Court held NRA unconstitutional, will be a factor in any further attempts to sue any one of the numerous code authorities formerly located here.

"It will set at rest," commented Maxwell E. Lopin, attorney for the millinery NRA agency, "any fears entertained by other code authorities who feel they might have to restore money collected and used by authorities before the Schechter case," on which NRA was invalidated in the high court.

Justice Levy asserted, in dismissing the millinery suit, that "the plaintiffs have no cause for action against the incorporated code authority for monies collected to be paid out under a mistake of law."

Plaintiffs in the action, the B. Seiden Hat Co. and the William F. Chiniquy Co., both of Chicago, had asked also that funds now held by the authority be taken over by a receiver and returned to the firms from which they were collected "by extra legal and unconstitutional means."

This and several other related requests also were dismissed by Justice Levy.

The sum involved in the litigation was not disclosed. Max Meyer, director, and other code authority members were defendants.

Monkey Leader, Caught, Gets Away

'Capone' Agrees to Truce at Point of Banana.

By the Associated Press.

Massapequa, N. Y., Aug. 23.—"Al Capone," sinister, elusive leader of a gang of escaped monkeys, permitted himself to be captured long enough to have his picture taken and eat a few bananas today and then took it on the lam again.

"Capone," who has carried a price of $50 on his head since he led a wholesale zoo break from Frank Buck's monkey colony here Wednesday, surrendered meekly to L. C. Nicol, a member of Buck's "bring 'em back alive" organization, at the point of a banana.

"Capone" was a willing subject for photographers as long as the bananas lasted. In fact, he seemed so penitent that Nicol began to believe he had mended his ways and relaxed his vigilance a little.

Immediately a cunning light stole into "Capone's" eyes and, looking around quickly for an opening, he scampered across the park, over the fence and away.

Nicol, highly disgusted, thereupon announced that the 100 or more monkeys still large probably never would be captured.

Of the 150 to 175 monkeys that originally escaped, only about 45 have been accounted for.

Gov. Earle Hits Hoover Policies At Convention

National Young Democrats Hear Speakers Assail G.O.P. 'Old Deal.'

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Aug. 23.—Gov. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania, addressing the National Young Democratic convention here tonight, assailed the Hoover foreign trade policy and praised the New Deal for turning "the eyes of the country in upon itself."

His remarks were the second of the day aimed at the former Republican President. Earlier, Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin, answered Hoover's recent attacks on the Roosevelt Administration.

The fundamental change wrought by the New Deal, Earle said, was that "the center of gravity has swung away from New York toward this Middle West where it belongs."

"As an industrialist myself, and as Governor of a great industrial State, I feel that change keenly."

Stating that the "folly of the old deal" can be traced to foreign markets, Earle declared "the obsession of foreign trade reached its height when Herbert Hoover was Secretary of Commerce. He flung out a series of 'go-getters' across the globe to 'sell America to the world.' Unfortunately, America was being 'sold out' at home."

Fifteen hundred young delegates from all sections of the Nation whistled and cheered as speakers praised the progress of their organization and invited them to lead in the fight for Roosevelt in 1936.

Officers Named.

H. L. Snyder, West Virginia State chairman, was named permanent chairman of the convention. Others chosen were Ed I. McKinley, Arkansas, clerk; Robert Dowling, Connecticut, assistant clerk; Genevieve Latt, Pennsylvania, assistant clerk, and Ingram B. Pickett, Missouri, sergeant at arms.

Regarding a policy of domesticism, Earle said he did not mean the New Deal is in any way a sectional movement.

"It is not turning the Nation inward for the specific benefit of the Midwest. East Coast, West Coast and South will benefit equally with the interior States from the re-orientation of the national effort."

The Old Deal, he said, wanted low labor and food costs to meet foreign competition, while the New Deal wants higher incomes to give industry customers at home.

He answered those crying "Save the Constitution" with an assertion that the Constitution was written with a view to meeting changing conditions.

Guffey Is Praised.

Earle said that when he hears "reactionaries complain of what they term the 'confusion' of the New Deal, I take it as an implied compliment to the President and our party. They must have expected an administration of demigods if they thought the chaos in which the Old Deal ended could be straightened out in two and a half years."

The Governor paid tribute to the Democratic Senator from Pennsylvania for passage of the Guffey coal bill, "another major achievement of the Roosevelt Administration * * * asked for by both operators and miners." He said the measure averts what might have been a major catastrophe in the march to recovery."

Cheers Greet Speech.

Cheering and whistling delegates shouted approval to a party leader's reply to former President Hoover's criticism of the Administration.

"It all depends on whose baby has the measles!" Senator Duffy, of Wisconsin, asserted as he compared Hoover's recent statements with those a decade ago, when, Duffy said, the Republican leader was advocating emergency powers for the President.

The Wisconsin Senator's speech was the first oratorical blast of the two-day national gathering. It was opened at 11:10 a. m. (Central standard time) by its president, Clifford Woodward, of Iowa, with its announced objective the establishment of Young Democratic clubs in every hamlet of the country as an aid to the party in next year's campaign.

President Orders Retention Of State Department Veteran

WILBUR J. CARR.

Waiving age retirement restrictions, President Roosevelt yesterday authorized Wilbur J. Carr, Assistant Secretary of State, to continue in office for a further period not to exceed five years.

Mr. Carr would have retired from active duty October 31, 1935. On June 1 last, Mr. Carr completed 43 consecutive years of service in the State Department.

In announcing the extension of service granted by the President, Secretary of State Hull expressed his gratification.

"It goes without saying that this act of the President will be welcome news to the State Department and to the Foreign Service," he said. "The deep satisfaction which those of us professionally associated with Mr. Carr feel at knowing that he will continue to be at his desk will likewise be shared, I think, by official Washington and by those American business men throughout the country who have interests or ties abroad and who have learned to count upon the support of the great organization which Mr. Carr has been so instrumental in creating and guiding."

Discrimination Charged in Truck Contracts; Plot Is Hinted.

was named quartermaster general in February, 1934.

Favoritism Charged.

Hitting at the handling of truck orders by Bash's department, the committee at one point said:

"There is more favoritism on behalf of certain bidders on Army trucks, discrimination against other bidders, than anything else we have investigated, with the possible exception of favoritism shown Joe Silverman by officers of the quartermaster general's corps, and by others in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War."

The report said evidence of a plot by which Silverman, for a 7½ per cent commission, would endeavor to divide a $10,000,000 truck order between Chevrolet, Ford and Chrysler would be laid before the Attorney General and the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia.

Silverman's plan, supposed to have been proposed late in 1933, was described by the committee as an attempted "shakedown" of the Government.

It said evidence and testimony established that it involved splitting the proposed $750,000 commission among Silverman, Frank Speicher, New York inner tube dealer, and Norman K. Haig, who directs General Motors Corporation sales to the Government.

Brig. Gen. A. E. Williams, former assistant quartermaster general, recently was ordered discharged from the Army for accepting a loan from Speicher.

At the War Department it was said Maj. Gen. Bash either was at Fort Monroe or Langley Field yesterday, on an inspection trip.

Col. Seaman now is on duty at Third Corps headquarters in Baltimore.

U. S. Denies Paying Slain Gang Informer

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings denied yesterday that the Justice Department had paid Jimmie La Capra, Kansas City gangster recently slain in New York for "snitching."

His action was occasioned by published reports (not carried by the Associated Press) which quoted him as saying the murdered man was paid a last fee six weeks ago "for services rendered."

La Capra visited the Justice Department earlier this summer and demanded aid, saying he was "broke" and feared gangdom's retribution.

Senators Display Nerves and Humor

By the Associated Press.

Frayed nerves were apparent in the Senate's session last night, but there was also good humor.

At one point, Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, complained of noise in the chamber and asked "may we have order?"

"We may, but I don't think we will," was the reply of Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, who was presiding.

Robinson then became serious and warned that unless Senators were orderly he would call them by name.

Will Rogers Burial Plans Are Delayed

Body May Be Removed to Oklahoma in Month.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 23.—The body of Will Rogers is expected to remain here at least a month before return to his native Oklahoma for interment.

No word as to the removal came today from Mrs. Rogers, in seclusion at the ranch home near Santa Monica. The late actor-humorist's attorney, Oscar Lawler, said it was too soon after the funeral to expect the family to be making arrangements for taking the body to Oklahoma—as has been planned, eventually.

The body reposes in a mausoleum receiving vault at Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Glendale, about which an estimated 100,000 persons jammed while it lay in state before funeral services yesterday.

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Moving pictures in which the late Will Rogers appeared will be handled, the president of a film company said today, "on the same basis as though he were still alive and working."

"We have been deluged with telegrams and letters" said Sidney R. Kent, head of Fox Film Corporation, "urging us to release the new Rogers pictures, to reissue the old ones and to make all the pictures available for theaters.

Rogers-Post Memorial May Be in State Capitol

Oklahoma City, Aug. 23 (AP).—The Oklahoma capitol grounds were proposed tonight as a site for permanent State memorials to Will Rogers and Wiley Post.

A committee of Oklahoma City business men will confer with Gov. E. W. Marland Monday and ask him to appoint a commission with State-wide representation to assume direction of the movement.

Don L. Branham, committee head, suggested the capitol grounds. He said he had found sentiment in favor of separate monuments to honor the famous pair.

Plans for a memorial to Rogers are being considered at Claremore, his home town, where many contributions have been received.

Rush of Buying Pushes Stocks To New Highs

War Materials Demand Is Factor in Market's Advance.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 23. — Several financial markets pushed forward again today, despite sharp unsettlement in the early dealings caused by overnight Washington developments.

Industrial shares in the stock exchange again stepped up to a new high level since 1931, as measured by price averages, with several up $2 to $3. Power and aircraft stocks were in particular demand, as European tension over the Italo-Ethiopian situation continued, but most brokers said that was a minor factor in the market.

Public utility shares registered several declines of $1 to more than $3 in a brief selling flurry in response to the House acceptance of the compromise on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, evidently ending the impasse over the effort to enact public utility legislation at this session of Congress.

Also, cotton futures broke $3 to $4.15 a bale on the announcement that the Government loan for this year would be cut to 9 cents a pound from 12, although growers would be compensated to guarantee a 12-cent return to those co-operating with the restriction plan.

But utility shares cut their losses roughly in half, while industrials leaped forward and cotton recovered to finish with losses of $2 to $3.05 a bale.

Wheat at Chicago recouped early losses and finished ½ to 1 cent a bushel higher. Corn closed ⅜ to ⅞ of a cent higher, but cattle and hogs continued their reaction of the past few days.

The world silver market stiffened, the price for foreign metal in New York rising ⅝ of a cent to 65¾ cents an ounce. This, together with recent strength of copper and lead prices, prompted active buying of nonferrous metal shares.

While brokers mostly sought to minimize the possible demand for war materials in connection with strength of certain shares, the New York Post said that parts for about 21 airplanes and some caterpillar wheels capable of use on army tanks were placed aboard the Italian liner Roma here today.

Long Says Roosevelt Is Heading For War

Newark, N. J., Aug. 23 (AP).—Senator Huey Long of Louisiana left Newark airport by plane for Washington this afternoon after "predicting" President Roosevelt would involve the United States in the Italo-Ethopian dispute.

"I don't understand President Roosevelt's maneuvers," Long said, "but I think he wants to get into war. It is common of every failing ruler to resort to war in an attempt to restore his popularity."

First Jail in 20 Years Opened in Coast Town

Grass Aalley, Calif., Aug. 23 (AP).—Grass Valley opened its new jail today—the first one it has had in 20 years.

The city, nestled in the Mother Lode gold mining district, sold the site of the old jail to a hotel in 1915. In recent years, while the population was increasing from 4,000 to 6,000, the law breakers were jailed in nearby towns.

Tugwell Forms Small-Income Housing Plan

ed to cost from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 each while the smaller ones will be proportionately lower.

The new housing will be offered for rent to families whose heads have steady employment but whose incomes are low. Two requirements for tenancy are that the head of the family is employed and that he does not earn more than a specified amount. The amount probably will range from $1,000 to $1,200 a year, depending on the locality and prevailing conditions.

20 Per Cent Rental.

The plan calls for construction of apartments that can be rented for approximately 20 per cent of the annual income of the occupant. While most of the buildings will be designed to house a large number of families, there may be some five- or six-family apartments and even some single houses.

The survey has been completed for most of the cities. Sites have been tentatively selected with reference to transportation and other facilities. There will be no effort to move industries to these sites, but tenants of the apartments will be expeced to continue their work in the cities.

Superior to Slum Plan.

Advocates of the suburban housing plan argue that it is superior to the plan of replacing slums with modern buildings because of the difference in real estate values in congested and in suburban areas. It is argued that better houses can be rented for less in the suburbs than in cities.

At Rural Resettlement headquarters it was argued that the Tugwell program does not conflict with the housing projects conducted under the direction of Secretary Ickes, but that it is supplemental to them.

While no hint as to the location of the new housing projects has been given, it has been pointed out that they would be well adapted to such industrial cities as Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit and St. Louis. In fact, the proposal is sufficiently broad in scale to include nearly all the larger cities of the country.

The survey has been going on quietly for weeks and when an allotment is asked the request is expected to be accompanied by fairly complete plans. It was said that no estimate of the cost of the entire project could be made at this time, but it is possible that it can run from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

John G. Winant Named to Head Social Board

bility, was born in New Hampshire in 1899. He has degrees from Princeton, Dartmouth and the University of New Hampshire. He began his political career as a member of the New Hampshire State Senate and served two terms as Governor of the State. He served overseas in the war.

Winant has been a member of the President's committee on economic security, which had much to do with drafting the social security program. Last summer he served as one of the mediators in the threatened textile strike. For a number of years he has been prominently identified with social welfare work.

Altmeyer was at one time labor commissioner of Wisconsin. He was a member of the technical board which advised the economic security committee and he took a prominent part in the work of the compliance division of NRA.

Miles has practiced law in Fort Smith and Little Rock, Ark. He is a native of Virginia. Recently he has been a regional adviser for the Public Works Administration.

An executive director is yet to be named by the Social Security Board.

A skeleton organization maintained by the economic security committee probably will be turned over to the new organization.

Winant Welcomes Job

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Aug. 23.—John G. Winant, the former New Hampshire Governor, welcomed his appointment by President Roosevelt today as chairman of the new Social Security Board.

Winant, who is here as assistant director of the international labor office in connection with the League of Nations, said he was pleased at his appointment because it offers "opportunities on a question concerning which I have made a life study."

"I am deeply interested in this problem, affecting the lives of some 25,000,000 persons at home," he said.

As assistant director of the international labor office, Winant has had charge of the section dealing with old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, subjects to which he will devote himself at Washington.

He recently visited England to study the functioning of social insurance there. The labor office has been planning to send him to the all-American labor conference at Santiago, Chile, in December.

Winant said he had made no plans yet, but it was pointed out by friends that his Washington appointment implies his resignation from his Geneva post.

British Forces To Be Massed At Suez Canal

Defense Machine Swings Into Action as War Threat Grows.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 23.—The defense committee of the British cabinet ordered the imperial defense machine today to swing into position to maintain the empire's dominance of the Mediterranean, protect her colonies in Africa and keep open her lines of communication.

It directed provision of elaborate naval, military and air defenses for the Suez Canal.

On protection and control of that gateway depends the very life of the empire, it was asserted. In the event of war in East Africa, the canal would become a key point. Its closing to warships and transports of combatants is already being discussed.

Such a move, one observer said, would be a mortal blow to Mussolini's East African ambitions.

During the meeting of the imperial defense committee at No. 10 Downing street today, the problem of Suez Canal defense was discussed at length. One report had it that grave concern was expressed over the possibility the Italians might attempt to seize the canal in case of war.

The opinion was expressed in both naval and military circles that the fleet alone is incapable of holding the canal and that the army and air force have already received instructions for use in case of trouble.

One of the chief worries of the British is possibility of attack by submarines and aircraft.

The admiralty, officials of which have long and publicly lamented the size and condition of the British fleet, was told, an informant said, to hasten the massing in Mediterranean waters of the strongest British naval force ever assembled there, to establish headquarters at Malta and to be ready for any eventuality.

Fleet to Be Massed.

In diplomatic circles the opinion was expressed that the British navy is not prepared to enforce the will of the British government in the Mediterranean and the statement was made that the admiralty had so reported to the cabinet when asked if it is ready for action.

An enlarged Mediterranean fleet, already provided for before the July naval review, will be assembled at Malta soon, naval observers said. There will be five fast battleships of the Queen Elizabeth type and three famed battle cruisers—the 42,000-ton Hood and the Renown and Repulse, of 32,000 tons each. The arrival of the Repulse may be delayed; she is in the dockyard at present.

Despite this prospect, considerable apprehension was expressed in Whitehall concerning the power and ability of this fleet.

From Athens came unconfirmed reports that a British air squadron was hurring toward the Sudan and would land there tomorrow. From other widely scattered points came rumors of troop movements, likewise unsubstantiated by officials here.

War Plans in Colonies.

Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, saw new British efforts to preserve peace in Africa started through diplomatic channels today, then left to spend the week-end at Norfolk, where he will keep in touch with the situation by private wire.

Air officials expressed hope they will be able to assemble sufficiently large squadrons of fighting machines in the vicinity of the Suez.

No indication of projected army and air moves was given by officials, however, although it was said considerable bodies of native troops are involved in British plans for defense of the colonies.

George Lansbury, leader of the labor opposition in Parliament, said the United States "cannot possibly keep out of the next war."

Selassie Offers To Yield Land For Italian Use

Would Sell Aussa Province in Move to Appease Duce, Reduce Slavery.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 23.—Emperor Haile Selassie, who already has decreed death for any Ethiopian who attacks an Italian, took further precautions today to make certain no Ethiopian act or situation will touch off the powder of an African war.

He offered Italy his province of Aussa, hoping its sale might save his empire from war.

He ordered a sharp watch set upon the activities of Italian consulate staffs.

He personally directed a round-up of beggars, lepers and chained debtors on Addis Ababa streets and their removal to prevent offense to foreigners.

He received assurance American residents would have safe conduct from the country should their evacuation become necessary.

Determined to overlook no detail in his effort to keep peace with Italy, he sent his secretary sloshing through the mud of the capital's streets to the Italian legation to express his personal sympathy for Baron Muzzi Falconi, the Italian consul, who was critically injured by accidental discharge of a revolver on a hunting trip.

Size of Province.

(The Province of Aussa, which the Emepror offered Italy, lies between the eastern slope of the Ethiopian uplands and the borders of Eritrea and French Somaliland. Its boundaries are not clearly defined where it merges into the Doaakil Province to the north. On the south, however, it ends at the hills which lead up to the heights along which the railroad runs from Addis Ababa toward Djbouti. Its elevation varies from sea level to about 1,000 feet and it is roughly equal in area to its neighbor, French Somaliland.)

The Emperor said that, if Italy will accept this province, he will apply the proceeds to the abolition of slavery, the building of schools and roads and the establishment of hospitals.

While he made overtures to Italy, the Emperor ordered close watch of the Italian consulates as a precautionary measure, complaint having been made to him that some of them were staffed beyond the needs of Italian trade or Italian nationals and maintained wireless communication with the governors of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

The clean-up of beggars, lepers and others who have been seen in numbers on the streets of Addis Ababa was not ascribed to the fear of spies. It was aimed at the elimination of annoyances and part of a campaign for order and stricter policing.

Conferences Held.

The safety of Americans, whom the Emperor has asked his subjects to treat courteously at all times, was the subject of a series of conferences between Cornelius Van H. Engert, charge d'affaires of the American legation, and leading American residents.

They were assured by Franco-Ethiopian railroad authorities that railway facilities would be available for speedy evacuation of Americans if Addis Ababa should be attacked from the air. There are 115 Americans in the country. Of these, 85 are missionaries.

While the Emperor, somewhat heartened by the news from London of the British cabinet's stand, tried to stave off hostilities, his capital and the surrounding plateau country shivered from unseasonable cold. The people struggled through streets turned into quagmires by torrential rains. Foreigners hurried to meagerly stocked stores seeking heavier clothing and rubber boots and clamored in the city market for firewood.

$120 Traffic Fine.

New York, Aug. 23 (U.P.).—Sidney Goldwin, 27, paid a traffic fine that really was a fine today—$120 worth. He pleaded guilty to 24 parking violations, for which police had been seeking him since 1933.

France, Britain Seen Near Rift On War Policy

French Are Unwilling to Take Drastic Action Against Italy.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 23.—A serious rift in the Franco-British "united front"—one that may affect the whole trend of efforts of diplomats and the League of Nations to prevent an Italo-Ethiopian war—was indicated tonight by a government spokesman.

Statements in England that France is willing to support drastic action against Italy, and that Premier Pierre Laval so informed Capt. Anthony Eden, of Britain, were declared to be "unfounded."

France is prepared to support Britain "only to a certain extent," the spokesman said.

French Policy.

An impression in England that France would back Britain's Italo-Ethiopian course to the hilt amazed Paris. On the contrary, it was said, Capt. Eden returned to England following breakdown of the three-power peace parleys with a full understanding of just what limitations France placed upon her support.

The spokesman reiterated that the French policy is colored by these three factors:

1. A desire to maintain the authority of the League.

2. France's obligation to consider sympathetically the position of Italy, with whom she enjoys warmer relations than at any time since the World War.

3. The delicate condition of Europe, which probably would be disturbed by any action which would (a) cause Italy to withdraw from the League or (b) weaken Italy as result of the African campaign so that the present balance of power in Europe was upset.

Drastic Action Feared.

Of the three points, the first probably is the most powerful, a strong League being the keystone of French foreign policy. In desire to support the League, French policy coincides with Britain's—but the foreign office here considers that drastic action, far from maintaining authority of the League, may cause Italian withdrawal and wreck the whole Geneva collective security arrangement.

So far there is no indication that France has found a line of conduct which will avoid all the dangers contained in the present crisis. British action is awaited with anxiety in hope some method of procedure can be found which will prevent the African emergency from increasing and at the same time solve the French dilemma.

French Troops Counter Italy's Border Drills

Nice, France, Aug. 23.—An army of 20,000 French soldiers is ready to begin maneuvers on the Italian frontier while Mussolini's huge army drills in northern Italy.

With most of the old garrisons transferred last spring to the German frontier fortifications, a small force will stage mimic battles in southern France next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser, member of the Superior War Council, will be in charge.

Willys, Former Envoy, Gravely Ill at Home

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—John N. Willys, automobile manufacturer and former Ambassador to Poland, is critically ill at his home in Riverdale, it was learned tonight from members of the family. He is 61 years old.

Although semiparalyzed, it was said Willys is fully conscious. Mrs. Willys is in virtually constant attendance and the former envoy's only daughter, Mrs. Jose Delanda, also visits him frequently. Willys was stricken early in May.

Kite Tied to Waist Drags Man Into Sea

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 23 (UP). Stephen Yankoudes, 40, went to the beach today, clad in a bathing suit, to fly a kite. He tied the string of a giant kite to his waist and was getting along famously until the kite, driven by a stiff breeze, started across the Atlantic in the general direction of Europe. Lifeguards cut the string and rescued Yankoudes, who can't swim, 60 yards off-shore.

16,000 in Italy Volunteer for Air-Force Jobs

Personnel Will Be Tripled as Warning That Home Defense Is Strong.

By the United Press.

Rome, Aug. 23.—Enthusiasm for Premier Benito Mussolini's East African adventure was evidenced today when 16,000 applications were received for 4,750 air force posts.

The air force called for applicants to take examination as volunteer technicians and mechanics. Because of the flood of applications the order was withdrawn.

The air force expansion program calls for virtual tripling of personnel. Much of this power will be used against Ethiopia and the rest will be massed in Italy to warn "any enemy falsely suspecting" that Italy's home defenses have been crippled.

Mussolini and other military leaders tonight were preparing for opening of the gigantic military maneuvers on the northern frontier. At a zero hour Sunday, half a million troops will begin demonstrating that Italian military power has not been diluted by the African campaign. The maneuvers will last one week, employing the most powerful weapons of modern warfare.

Germany is theoretical enemy in the war games.

A Japanese air mission, before leaving Italy, today telegraphed Mussolini expressing warm admiration of Italy's flying corps and wishing it "the most glorious future."

Gen. Itoh, head of the Oriental visitors, was certain "that the traditional friendship between Italy and Japan will happily be maintained."

The expression was significant in the light of recent Italo-Japanese tension aroused by reports Japan has been supplying arms to Ethiopia. Japan has a commercial interest in the black empire.

Prof. Aldo Castellani, a member of the senate and a world-famed authority on tropical diseases, today was appointed general health supervisor of the Italian African expeditionary force. He formerly spent some time at Tulane University, New Orleans, La.

'Social Credit' Party Is Victor In Alberta Race

Benevolent Government to Pay $25 Dividends to Province Citizens.

By the Associated Press.

Calgary, Alberta, Aug. 23.—A benevolent government that promises "credit dividends" of at least $25 a month to all adult citizens of Alberta Province emerged tonight from an avalanche of votes in legislative elections.

Late returns from yesterday's balloting showed 59 candidates of the Social Credit League, advocating the plan, either elected or leading in the race for 63 seats. The four other seats apparently were distributed among the Liberals, Conservatives and United Farmers of Alberta.

It will be at least 18 months, said William Aberhart, 57-year-old evangelist and school teacher who led the campaign of the Social Credit forces, before the new government will be in a position to pay its initial dividend.

Aberhart is expected to succeed Premier Reid, chosen by the United Farmers government.

The sum of $25 a month, Aberhart said, was suggested merely for illustration. It would not be less and as Social Credit plans move forward it will be the plan to increase the monthly dividend payments if possible.

Not every member of a household would receive $25 a month. For those from 16 to 20 years old payments would range from $5 to $20 a month. A wife would receive $25 as well as her husband.

State Credit Planned.

"A State credit house" is to be created. Under the plan, each citizen would be given a dividend book and a book of blank non-negotiable certificates.

A credit entry of $25 will be made in the book at the credit house each month. Non-negotiable securities are to be used for the purchase of goods or services, no new money being issued.

If a citizen refused to work when employment is obtainable, he will be suspended from the dividend privileges, under the scheme.

It was estimated that it would take $120,000,000 annually to pay the basic dividend at the rate of $25 a month to each citizen.

Experts will be called upon to draw up details of financing.

Aberhart said it will not be a "giagantic scheme of taxation."

He believes producers and distributors should be able to collect a levy that would provide the basic dividends.

Tough Town Erects Church

Holbrook, Ariz., Aug. 23 (AP).—When the "Bucket of Blood" saloon was Holbrook's favorite meeting place, the carousing cowboys boasted that the northern Arizona town was too tough for churches. Now a community church is under construction.

Texas Votes Today Upon Prohibition

By the Associated Press.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 23.—A close vote was predicted by observers tonight when Texans ballot tomorrow on a proposal to repeal the 16-year-old State prohibition law. Both wets and drys claimed victory.

Because of persistent apathy, only 400,000 to 600,000 of the 800,000 persons eligible are expected to vote.

United States Senator Morris Sheppard, co-author of the eighteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution, battled for the drys. He charged conditions since repeal of the national dry laws have been unsatisfactory.

Anti-prohibitionists declared the State is overrun with bootleggers.

Gov. James V. Allred will vote at Wichita Falls, his home, against repeal. He took no active part in the campaign.

The amendment to be voted on presents three main propositions: Repealing State-wide prohibition, prohibiting the open saloon and providing for a system of local option somewhat similar to that in effect in 1919 when the prohibition amendment was adopted.

Il Duce Warns World Powers Can't Stop Italy

civilians and has been preparing an army to attack us.

"We have, therefore, decided to take precautionary measures, and, for this reason, I have sent out soldiers to our colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland.

"I am not an enemy of any race, but I insist that Italian rights be respected by every race. That is what we intend to do in Ethiopia."

"Does the policy now being pursued by Italy in East Africa endanger 'the Stresa front' (between Italy, France and Great Britain) and the present European equilibrium?" I asked.

Denies European Threat.

"I can not believe," he replied, "that Italy's action in Ethiopia, which partakes of a purely local and colonial character, can influence—as asserted in some quarters—the development of the policy of European collaboration, to which it has given and still is disposed to give entire adherence.

"What could endanger the Stresa front and present European equilibrium would be the attitude of those wishing to ignore the absolute necessity of Italy's safety and expansion, and to create artificially a legend of perils to Europe that would result from a colonial campaign.

"These operations of ours differ in no way from the various military operations which other colonial powers have conducted in Asia and Africa. It is necessary to eliminate the firemen who would seek to spread flames."

Here Mussolini opened a large album lying on his desk. It was full of photographs of the devastation wrought by the British bombardment of Alexandria in 1882. Turning the leaves, he said:

"You have done much the same thing in America. How did you push your frontier back? You took possession of it by force from the Indians and Mexico.

"The United States consisted originally of thirteen colonies on the Eastern seaboard. Now you span the continent."

This seemed a good place to change the subject so I asked Il Duce about Italy and the League of Nations.

"What will Italy do if the League fails to arrive at a solution of the present problem? Would Italy in any eventuality withdraw from Geneva?" I inquired.

To Quit League if Necessary.

"Italy will pursue her aims—with Geneva or without Geneva or against Geneva," was the prompt and vigorous reply. "I can not believe, however, that taking care of one's own security is contrary to the principles of the covenant."

"How can a future world war be avoided? What does the future hold for the League of Nations?" I asked Mussolini.

He paused for a moment and then spoke with especial earnestness:

"A nation on the march, as the Italian nation is today, can not be stopped by the static conception of the life of peoples. It is precisely this static conception which constitutes the greatest danger for world peace. The League, if it desires to live, must be conscious of this danger, which anyhow is envisaged in articles 19 and 22 of the covenant."

"What is your excellency's opinion of the contention in some quarters that the covenant has modified the convention of 1888 which assured free passage through the Suez Canal in times of war as well as peace?"

"The covenant," he replied, "is part of the Versailles Treaty, which, under article 282, reconfirmed the full force of the convention of 1888."

Danger to White Race.

"Would Italy in event of war assume the right to search neutral vessels?"

"Italy will in whatever eventuality adhere strictly to the provisions of international law, as she has always done."

"What measures should be taken to arrest the apparently waning power of the white race?" was my final question.

"For years I have been calling the attention of world public opinion to the danger of the declining birth rate among Western peoples. All the world knows how tenaciously the Fascist government has been waging its fight for the increase and improvement of the Italian population.

"If the present disturbing depopulation of Occidental races should be accompanied by the renunciation of the right to send civilizing missions to peoples who still are in ignorance of the benefits of civilization, such mission was admirably fulfilled in the past century by Americans, disregarding the simple and primitive peoples to whom the North American continent belonged—then we should truly despair of the future."

House Passes Arms Embargo Under Gag Rule

feature but confessed himself helpless to prevent its enactment in temporary form. He declared that a mandatory policy "destroyed the country's opportunity for peace."

The House adopted the measure by a thunderous shout of "yeas," without a roll call. Action was taken under a rigid "gag" rule which prevented amendments from the floor in fear that the time limitation might be stricken out and limited debate to 40 minutes.

An hour's debate, however, was allowed on hte rule and that was devoted to the resolution, so altogether the House spent about 90 minutes on the subject. Brief as that time might seem for so important a subject it was in strong contras tto the fragmentary, casual debate of the Senate Wednesday which lasted only 25 minutes.

After half a dozen members had shouted that the measure was necessary to keep the country out of war and that peace for America was the most essential of all considerations, McReynolds sharply reminded the House that "you can pass 'neutrality' laws that will put you into war instead of keeping you out."

Cites African Threat.

The Foreign Affairs chairman also reminded those members who had intimated that Mr. Roosevelt could not be trusted to keep the country out of war that "the President has a greater responsibility to prevent war and maintain peace than any of you."

He said that he only consented to bring the temporary, mandatory neutrality legislation before the House because of the threatening Italo-Ethiopian controversy and the militant demand within the Congress that some kind of legislation be passed before Congress adjourned.

McReynolds, regretting time did not permit a thorough discussion of the objectionable features of mandatory neutrality legislation, projected the thought that should a foreign power attack Mexico, Canada or a Latin-American country, the President under the resolution would be powerless to assist this country's neighbor with arms. But, he concluded, all this could be corrected when Congress returned next year.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, declared that the adopton of a resolution of such gravity in the closing hours of the session "constituted a serious indictment of the Administration."

Other Attacks.

"Think of passing something that may jeopardize the future of our country in 40 minutes," Mrs. Rogers exclaimed, and added: "In the days to come we may regret our action today."

The mandatory features of the resolution were attacked also by Representative Harold Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, one of the little band remaining on Capitol Hill that voted against American entry into the World War. He declared the time had come "for Congress to stop voting by hysteria and get down to facts."

But the sharpest of all attacks was that made by Representative James W. Wadsworth (Republican), of New York. The usually noisy House became strangely silent as he talked, quietly and without flailing the air, so customary in House members.

The New Yorker termed the resolution an "extraordinary proposal," and said that while he appreciated and shared the high ideals of those sponsoring the legislation he did not regard their approach as "very realistic."

Pointing out that in the present threatened conflict disturbing the world Italy was a nation with great industrial resources while Ethiopia had none, he asked whether "the powerful should be permitted to attack the weak." The philosophy of the pending resolution, he asserted, was that the "weak would not be permitted weapons with which to defend itself."

No two wars are alike, Wadsworth asserted, nor are the circumstances preceding such conflicts ever alike. Thus why should the United States assume a rigid, inflexible policy in advance of such controversies, he asked.

He questioned the wisdom of whether this country, which he termed "the hope of the world for peace," should "freeze its neutrality policy in this way." Such action, he added, was "an open invitation to the great and powerful among nations to attack the weak."

"Peace is greatly to be desired," Wadsworth asserted, "but there is something more precious than peace, and that is liberty.

Cites American Revolution.

He begged the House to remember this Nation's struggle for liberty in 1776 and contended that had the philosophy underlying the pending measure guided the major nations of that period, the American Revolution and the formation of the United States would have been unsuccessful.

"Go slowly," he cautioned the House, "before committing this great country of ours to a philosophy that would make it impossible for defenseless people to defend their liberties."

Others speaking in behalf of the bill took exception to some of Wadsworth's remarks. Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat), of California, contending that the Wadsworth argument was fallacious because Italy, with its superior resources, soon could end the shipment of arms from this country to Ethiopia and that then, in the absence of any embargo, only Italy, the stronger nation, would benefit.

Thunder of Yeas.

The strongest pleas for the resolution came from Representatives Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas; Francis Sisson (Democrat), of New York, and Theodore Christianson (Republican), of Minnesota. Each, however, regretted the mandatory provision was not permanent and that the House would have no opportunity to make it so.

Maverick contended that Congress should not delegate to the President discretionary powers that vitally affect the future safety of the country and when the House burst into applause, he added that he was "speaking of the President not as an idividual but as an institution."

The policy of "staying out of war," he asserted, should not be terminated on February 29 next year, but should be a permanent policy. He also criticized the resolution because it did not restrict loans and contracts with belligerents. America, he insisted, must avoid all contact with nations at war in order to keep out of all conflicts.

As Maverick was speaking Representative William A. Ashbrook (Democrat), of Illinois, arose like a ghost out of the past and solemnly announced that as a member of Congress in 1915 he had voted against the McLemore resolution and that ever since 1917 he had regretted that action. He ardently favored the present resolution, he added.

When the House vote came there was a mighty thunder of yeas and a sprinkling of nays—leaving no doubt whatever of the popularity of the neutrality resolution.

Water Project At Vienna Stirs Tax Complaint

CitizenGroup IncludingDr. Newman Airs Protest to Town Council.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2304-M.

A demand that the town council rescind its previous action in making application for a Federal loan of $50,000 with which to install a town water system was voiced last night by a group of Vienna citizens, meeting with the council in the Town Hall. The special meeting of the Council was summoned by Mayor Edgar Bennett when a group of 25 citizens appeared at his house Monday night to voice a protest against any increase in town taxation. Opposition forces brought out about a hundred citizens last night, including many new residents of the town. Proponents of the bond issue had made no effort to muster strength, although the Fire Department was represented and a number of citizens favoring the council's previous action attended.

Opposition to the loan was based solely on the increase it would entail in corporation taxes. According to members of the council, arguments voiced by speakers for the opposition were frequently based on erroneous financial data, and came generally from persons who have recently installed their own water systems. Many of the opponents are among the group which has been urging that the town relinquish its charter and return to county government.

Dr. Sigmund Newman was one of the principal spokesmen for the opposition. Others who registered objections were Will Dixon, Earl Flohr and A. Caton.

M. O. Bradford spoke in favor of a town water supply, as did Councilmen Leon L. Freeman, Alton Money and Joseph Berry. Five persons living outside the corporation offered to pay for extending a main to their property if the town system was installed.

Answering what he felt to be erroneous criticism of the cost of the bond issue, Councilman Freeman stated that the average taxpayer, paying taxes of $20 per year, would be assessed $4 a year additional. On the other hand, his insurance premium, which now averages $10 per year on property taxed $20, would be reduced 10 per cent, leaving a $3 annual charge whether he used the town water or not.

If he connected with the town, he would be allowed 3,000 gallons of water per month at a flat rate of $2 per month. The latter charges are those used in the town of Fairfax, Freeman stated, whereas it is expected that Vienna would be able to finance its operation more cheaply as Fairfax had to bond itself for the entire amount of its loan at a higher rate of interest, whereas Vienna would receive 45 per cent as a gift from the Federal Government.

Freeman stated that residential insurance rates will be reduced 10 per cent and business rates 30 per cent if the water supply is installed. The engineering details of the installation, the size and distribution of mains and fire plugs were outlined by Councilman Berry. Figures were submitted from other Virginia municipalities, showing that such a system is not only self-liquidating but also in time a source of revenue to the town. The councilmen stated that the survey of residents to determine how many will connect with the mains if installed will be completed soon, a minimum of at least 50 subscribers being required to start on.

Contract for preparation of the town's application has already been given to the McCrary Engineering Corporation of Atlanta, Ga., which firm prepared the specifications several years ago. Inasmuch as all applications for a Federal loan must be filed before September 16, the council will make no effort to rescind its former action. If and when assured that the Government will make the loan, the council will then proceed to submit the necessary bond issue to a vote of the corporation.

The Fairfax County Health Board meeting in the offices of County Health Officer Dr. A. L. Carson yesterday afternoon after considering the advisability of continuing precautions against infantile paralysis agreed that Sunday schools, revivals and moving picture houses may lift the ban on September 2.

Dr. Carson was instructed to advise officials of the Fairfax Horse Show Association to postpone its annual show scheduled to be held September 6 and 7.

Man Collapses Under Grilling In Girl's Death

Worker Linked to Brutal Slaying of Pretty Blonde at Biddleford, Me.

By the United Press.

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 23.—Alexander Cloutier, dark-haired young sawmill worker, collapsed in his cell here late today as police prodded him with questions concerning the fate of comely 17-year-old Florence Grenier, whose broken body had been found in a shallow grave a few hours earlier.

A coroner's report showed that the petite blonde had been clubbed to death, apparently while resisting a criminal attack.

Dragged, dazed and half-fainting, to the undertaking parlor where Florence's bludgeoned body lay on a slab, Cloutier, sobbing and recoiling, refused to look at her, tightly closing his eyes. Back in his cell, the 25-year-old youth went limp and questioning had to be suspended.

Miss Grenier had been missing since Tuesday, when she left her home here to visit a sister of Cloutier to borrow a dress.

As a posse, aided by dogs, tramped the woods, Special Officer Arthur Paradis and Paul Roberge came upon the clumsy grave behind Goodwins Mill between Biddeford and Alfred.

The girl's body, clad in a white, red-dotted dress and undergarments, was buried beneath tin cans, boxes and other debris. Her white shoes were missing.

In a nearby lane sod had been stamped down as though from a struggle. Authorities believed the girl was slain during an assault attempt in the lane or in an automobile, and her body dragged to the rubbish pile. A stick and a piece of iron pipe, with matted hair and stains believed from blood on them, were discovered in the refuse heap. Authorities suspected the slayer used both weapons in the brutal killing.

Florence was betrothed to another man and had spurned the advances of Cloutier, police said they had learned.

Irene Grenier, younger sister of the slain girl, told authorities that Florence feared Cloutier and his too-ardent courtship, and that the youth had asked Irene to "put in a good word for me with your sister."

Cloutier was taken into custody Wednesday after a partly burned sedan belonging to his father was found in Alfred. The driver's seat was burned and upholstery had been cut away. Brown stains on the car were believed to be human blood.

Police claimed to have found blood stains on the sleeves of Cloutier's blue shirt and said that his face and body were scratched.

County Attorney Robert Seidel announced Cloutier would be arraigned tomorrow on a murder charge.

Things as They Are

Men Look for Jobs, Not Work; New Deal Has Started Something it Can't Stop.

By Samuel Crowther

IF the New Deal has anything in the nature of a basic idea or concept, it is that the President, if only he be given the power, has, instinct in him, the wisdom to arrange all affairs, including those of the individual, better than they ever before have been arranged. Both the power and the wisdom, it appears, can be delegated.

Up to date he has been given power in plenty, but he has cured no ills, not even those that can be cured by money. In spite of the record, the Democratic leaders in the present Congress, as in the last, have been forced to subscribe to the doctrine of presidential infallibility and have demanded that the members support bills, not on their merits but because the President wants them. Is anyone, including those in the Administration, prepared to face the consequences?

I am not one of those who impute to the President and his associates any grandiose scheme to socialize or Sovietize the United States. I think rather that the approach of the Administration has been sopohmoric and that the wide powers to govern have been asked, not because of a breadth of knowledge, but in default of knowledge. This Administration, as events have proved, has never been adequately informed on any subject it tackled but, like the small boy, has thought that a hammer was kit enough to mend even the most delicate mechanism of an automobile. That is why the promises and the performances of the Administration run along lines that will not meet even at infinity. I believe that the promises all have been made sincerely—but without the foggiest notion of how they could be fulfilled. One recalls the man who, signing a promissory note, fervently remarked: "Thank God, that debt is paid."

* * * *

RUGGED individualism came in for so many rousing whacks during 1933 and 1934 and we heard so much about the era of tooth and claw, of savage competition and other outlandish practices that had marked the growth of our Nation, that many younger men—that is, men who had not known much of the world before the war—were led to believe that life then was quite barbarous and that satisfying substitutes for individualism, competition and the like were at hand.

This belief has taken the not very profound form that it is the duty of government to provide jobs and that the duty of the citizen does not extend beyond taking the jobs—provided on inspection they seem satisfactory. Every large employer is swamped with applications for jobs, but none of them is burdened with applications for work—the number of men seeking wages is much larger than the number seeking work. Mr. Lammot du Pont, in a letter to me, put the case thus:

"Recovery will come, as it has come in every previous depression, because of the activities of enterprisers. Jobs do not grow on trees; they are created by the human mind—by the employer who has an idea which requires somebody's labor or the employe who has an idea that he can do something for the employer. The fellow who has the idea is the enterpriser. Now, our college graduates, whether they be engineers, chemists, professional men, or otherwise, should be our enterprisers. It is simply appalling that the mass of graduates of our colleges and universities appeal to the public to give them a job. There should be enough enterprisers among them to create jobs, not only for themselves but for a number of others besides."

* * * *

NOW take an example of rugged individualism and see what it means. The following comes from a correspondent traveling in the Middle West. He writes:

"I ran across an item of some interest involving the application of common sense to agricultural problems. A large hay and grain ranch occupying an entire mountain valley, was being ruined by swarms of grasshoppers. Instead of following the usual course of calling on Washington for aid, the owners got 25,000 turkeys and turned them out on the fields in charge of herders who drove them around like sheep. In due time the grasshoppers were gone and the turkeys were fattened for market—grasshopper on the hoof as it were, far superior to the fatuous meddling of our college farmers in Washington."

If the legislation already on our statute books be carried to its full conclusion, the owner of that ranch would probably be penalized for acting without orders from his regional supervisor. For few seem to realize that governmental control cannot be made successful if the individual is allowed any discretion.

The New Deal measures have failed in their administration, not only because of inexperience, but also because the administrators and administered have both thought only of giving something better. But the very essence of regulation is that the bitter must be prescribed with the sweet and hence at times, in order to strike a balance, a man deliberately be given something worse than he had been having instead of something better. And friends will have to be dosed in the same fashion as foes.

Most of the Administration measures can be made to work, if only the regulations be carried further and the rights of the individual scrapped. That is the trouble right now. The Administration is just finding out that it started something it could not stop.

Woman Fights Duel With Man After He Kills Her Companion

By the Associated Press.

Macon, Mo., Aug. 23.—The spurned affection of a slightly bald farmer for a pretty brunette was blamed tonight by Sheriff B. R. Williams for the squirrel hunt slaying of her companion, a married liquor company salesman.

The slaying was followed by a woodland gun battle between the woman and her asserted admirer. Both were wounded.

James Hunt, 48, farmer near Macon, surrendered today as a posse with bloodhounds sought him for the fatal shooting last night of Chester Noland, 42, of Savannah, Mo., and the wounding of Miss Blanche Stamp, 37, a neighbor of Hunt.

Sheriff Williams said Hunt asserted he shot in self-defense.

"But I learned otherwise," the sheriff said. "Hunt met the couple out in the woods and after asking what luck they were having went on a little ways, turned and killed Noland with one shot. Then he started firing at the woman, wounding her in the side and leg. She fired at Hunt with a shotgun and inflicted a slight wound in the head.

"Hunt has been jealous about the woman for a long time. It looks like he thought Noland was taking her away from him. But Noland was just a friend of Miss Stamp's family. He visited them on several occasions."

Sheriff Williams announced a first degree murder charge would be filed against Hunt, named in a coroner's jury verdict today as the person responsible for Noland's death. Hunt was held in jail here.

Officers said Miss Stamp told them she was struck by Hunt at a dance two years ago during a quarrel, but that he later apologized. She said her sister, Noland and herself had been squirrel hunting at the time of the shooting. The sister went on to the house before Hunt appeared.

Son of Dr. Work Takes Own Life On West Coast

Suicide at Hollywood Laid to Concern Over His Failing Health.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 23.—Worried by failing health, Robert V. H. Work, 37, son of former Secretary of the Interior Dr. Hubert Work, committed suicide today, officers said, by firing a pistol bullet into his head.

The note addressed to his wife, Lucie, whom he married last November, said "I cannot drag you through any mire of unhappiness."

The body was found by a maid in the hotel where he registered last night.

Work, who was engaged in the moving and storage business, came here from Denver, Colo. His first wife, Mrs. Irma Work, won a divorce in the Los Angeles courts and custody of their child. His second marriage took place shortly afterward.

Work's note, addressed to "My beloved Lucie," read:

"Forgive me, but I love you so much I can't drag you through any mire of unhappiness. There is nothing wrong at the office. It is too much of a burden to try to straighten out any of my affairs. It just keeps coming and coming. I had fought this for a long time, as Dr. Thompson can tell you.

"My adorable one, I love you more than anything. In fact, you are more than life itself and I would rather give that up than drag you on and to clear things up. Forever and ever, my sweet darling, I am yours, Bob."

Mrs. Work said her husband had no business troubles, as far as she knew, but that his health had been bad.

Work's father, whose home is in Pueblo, Colo., resigned as Secretary of the Interior to direct Herbert Hoover's campaign against Alfred E. Smith in 1928.

The younger Work was a graduate of the University of Colorado.

He was first married in June, 1924, to Miss Irma Weicker, daughter of R. V. Weicker, Denver moving and storage company executive.

For several years the younger Work was vice president and general manager of the moving and storage concern. After the divorce, he came to Los Angeles.

The second Mrs. Work formerly was a motion-picture company stenographer.

First Lady Pleads For Maimed Young

Mrs. Roosevelt Talks at Chautauqua Institution.

By the Associated Press.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, making her annual appearance today at Chautauqua Institution, asked a New Deal for the Nation's crippled and underprivileged children, pleading this was a public, rather than a private responsibility.

She said this was one of "certain types of things we have felt were private responsibilities which should gradually be taken out of the private class and be made a public responsibility."

Mrs. Roosevelt emphasized she was referring not only to the "obviously physically crippled," but also to those who were "mentally and morally" crippled because of undernourishment, poor homes, poor environments and parents who did not know how to "handle" their children to give them a proper start in life.

Asking that "everybody try to see that there is no family in any community where the children are actually hungry," she said "this all comes back to the individual responsibility of each person in each community of a democracy, not as partisans, but as citizens, to take community responsibility."

of an old Virginia family and was a cousin of L. T. Daniels, mayor of Falls Church.

It is not customary to summon coroner's juries in Arlington County, and Dr. Ransom's decision was based upon evidence gathered by him and Sheriff Kirby. The scraps of clothing and photographs of the murder room were taken to the Falls Church Police Station for evidence.

Hummer declared he knew of no one but himself who visited the old man.

As the bloodhounds were put on the trail and the posse began a search of neighboring woods, a detachment of Alexandria, Va., police was enlisted to aid in the hunt.

Knife-Killer Denies His Tale Of 25 Murders

Kimball's New Statement Holds Up California Hunt for Bodies.

By the Associated Press.

Auburn, Calif., Aug. 23.—Earl Kimball, 21, confessed killer of two, repudiated today his wild story of having slain 25 other men, but authorities considered extending their search for possible additional victims.

On the strength of Kimball's denial, Sheriff Elmer Gum called off, temporarily at least, plans for having a posse seek potential burying places in this isolated region.

The sheriff announced he would question the young itinerant prospector before deciding whether to proceed with the hunt.

Police Capt. Fritz Kaminsky, of Sacramento, announced he would send detectives here to question Kimball about the unsolved slaying of George Beekman, service station operator, in the State capital last December.

Previously Kimball had confessed the slaying of James G. Kennett, sr., retired Chicago contractor, and a youth tentatively identified as John T. Mangan, 17, of Sacramento.

Mangan's body was recovered several days ago and a search was instituted for the long missing Kennett. Kimball gave directions which led to discovery of Kennett's body.

Cognizant of the sensation his statement created, Kimball became boastful of his ability as a knife thrower. Last night he told newspapermen he had killed 25 other men in his two years of ranging the sparsely populated gold country. He mentioned names and places.

After a night of sleep in the Auburn jail he denied the wholesale killings.

Byrd Bill Provides Park for Virginia

Development Sought for High Knob Area.

By the Associated Press.

A national park would be established in the High Knob Mountain area in Scott and Wise counties under provisions of a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Berryville, Va.

Described as one of the most beautiful sections of Virginia, the park would be approximately 50,000 acres in area, including High Knob, from which can be seen parts of Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky and North Carolina.

Under provisions of the bill, which calls the park the Appalachian National Park, the Secretary of the Interior would first be authorized to accept land for purposes of the park given to the Federal Government and secondly would be authorized to investigate the cost of other property necessary to completion of the area. The site has been approved by the State commission on conservation and development.

Gen. Johnson's WPA Defense Brings Attacks

Defends Policies in N. Y. Talk, but Critics Cry 'Terrorization.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 23.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, speaking before a surprise meeting of 2,000 WPA workers today, defended his policies as administrator and was immediately accused by a federation of technicians of trying to "terrorize WPA workers."

Johnson's talk before the meeting, which he had called with such unexpectedness that many WPA officials were not apprised of it, praised the Federal Government's actions and struck back at those who had criticized his own administration in New York City.

"There has been no delay, no bobble, and no mistake in this department," he said, "and I'd like to cram it down the lying throat of any man who said there has been."

Declaring that "in 90 days we can make enough jobs to take everyone off relief and put them to work," the general blamed past difficulties on delays of the National Re-employment Service in clearing applicants requisitioned by the WPA.

Immediately following his speech, Marcel Scherer, organizer for the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians claiming a membership of 3,000 in New York City, issued a statement declaring that Johnson's aim was "to cut wages, terrorize WPA workers and to put over a coolie standard of living."

He termed Johnson's address "an attempt to hide the fact that the concessions to WPA workers came as the result of their organized protests."

Man Dies in Hospital After Turning On Gas

William J. Lauder, 30, of the first block of Fourth street southeast, died early yesterday of gas poisoning, less than an hour after he had been found unconscious in the kitchen of his home.

He was discovered by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Lauder, shortly after midnight, when she returned after visiting friends. In the kitchen stove three jets were open, police said.

Casualty Hospital physicians and the Fire Rescue Squad worked futilely over Lauder for more than an hour. A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Fiance's Body Still Missing In Boat Blast

Burns Suffered by Girl Tennis Star Slight; on Holiday Trip.

Miss Clara Tabler, District tennis star, yesterday was recovering from burns suffered in a motor boat explosion which claimed the life of her fiance, James T. Stark, 30, of 815 Twenty-first street northwest, in the Potomac River Thursday.

Her whereabouts, however, remained a mystery, even to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tabler, of the Marcheta Apartments, who knew only that she was staying with friends. She suffered slight burns of her arms and legs.

Saved Bride-to-Be.

Meanwhile, soldiers from Fort Washington dragged the river for the body of Stark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lovell Stark, who drowned in 10 feet of water after saving the life of his pretty, 30-year-old fiancee, to whom he was to have been married within a week.

Those seeking the body were working principally between the mouth of Broad Creek on the Maryland shore and Wellington Villa, on the Virginia shore.

Kept Girl Afloat.

The boat in which Stark and Miss Tabler had embarked on a holiday visit to her sister, Miss Amy Tabler, in Colonial Beach, was a 14-foot craft with an outboard motor.

After the explosion, both leaped into the river, their clothes aflame. Miss Tabler could not swim. Stark kept her up until he sank to his death a few minutes before help arrived. The rescue was made by two Alexandria youths who were rowing nearby.

The girls, all Government employes, are the daughters of Mrs. Mary Schneider, of the Fourth street address.

Last rites for Miss Schneider were held at the residence yesterday at 1 p. m., with Rabbi J. T. Loeb, of the Southeast Hebrew Congregation, officiating. Burial was in Southeast Hebrew Cemetery.

Inquiry Turns To Ship Lobby; Moley Is Named based on something he read in the papers.

"If you use my name in your testimony again," Tyding snapped, "be damned sure you're right."

Schwellenbach read to Hopson the record of the wanderings of the 484,400 shares and asked if the transaction was not "an outright rigging of the market and a series of wash sales."

"No, I don't think so," Hopson replied. "There was nothing unusual about it."

"You discussed with your brokers, did you not, the question of creating activity in the stock?"

"That's correct."

"Do you contend that it is customary for brokers to use such devious methods and buy and sell the same stock?"

"I don't think it was a devious method and so I can't answer that question."

No large company could market its stock offerings, Hopson continued, without insuring market stability and activity. The activity, he said, was to make certain that holders of the stock could readily dispose of it and buyers promptly find offerings.

'What of It?'—Moley

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Raymond Moley, commenting on the testimony of Ira A. Campbell before the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee today, said:

"Mr. Campbell's statement that I lunched last week with Mr. John Franklin, Mr. Kermit Roosevelt and himself is correct.

"I have spoken to no member of Congress nor the President about pending shipping legislation.

"I have never received a fee nor a gratuity from shipping companies.

"I have no public office and no official responsibility.

"I have not yet reached the stage of demagoguery where I believe all businss men have horns and cloven hoofs. I shall continue to associate with such of them as are my friends as usual.

"My only comment is, what of it?"

Senators Start Fight to Block Cotton Subsidy

500,000 bales must be disposed of between September 1 and January 1. It is easily to be predicted that the market price of cotton may go to very disastrously low levels and call for an enormous expenditure on the part of the Government in the form of subsidy."

Smith also pointed out that there is a tax of 6 cents a pound on cotton produced in excess of the Bankhead limitations, and that if cotton should go to 9 cents growers of surplus cotton would receive only 3 cents a pound for their crop.

The South Carolina Senator declared there is no need to manipulate the price of cotton to enable American cotton to compete in the world market. He said the world price still is being set by the American price in spite of the decline in American exportations.

"So far as I am advised," Smith said, "not a single Southern Senator, that is, a Senator from a cotton-growing State interested in cotton, was called into the conference to determine the fate of the cotton growers and the fate of the South, and in a large measure the financial welfare of America. According to the press, Mr. Chester Davis, Mr. Morgenthau, Mr. Wallace and Mr. Jesse Jones were the principal consultants. Mr. Wallace is from Iowa, Mr. Davis from Montana, Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Jones from Texas."

Bankhead declared that "an organized program will be started at once to induce the cotton farmers to hold their cotton for a price of 12 cents or better."

"The farmers," he said, "would rather sell at a fair price than to accept a bounty from the Government, especially when they are in position to get the bounty if needed to assure the price."

Bankhead said that "if the farmers stand firm and use the Government's credit facilities, this crop should sell for 13 cents a pound."

"There has never been a time before," he said, "when the available supply (exclusive of Government 13-cent cotton) of the grade and staples needed by consumers was less than a year's requirements."

25 More Men For WPA Job

Requests for Help Received at Hyattsville Office Now Total 65.

Sixty-five men have now been requested from the southern Maryland district for work on PWA projects, it was announced yesterday at the National Reemployment Office in Hyattsville.

Claude Gaylor, manager, said the latest request was received from the Baltimore district for 20 laborers and five painters for a project at Fort George G. Meade. These will begin work Monday.

Another late-approved project—work on shore facilities and coast guard station at North Beach—is expected to result in a call for men within a short while.

Approximately three weeks ago the first WPA work in the southern Maryland district was instituted at Indianhead. It included general cleaning of the Government powder works grounds. Twenty-six of the 40 men requested have been furnished.

All men selected for these jobs are drawn from the relief rolls of the county in which they live. Miss A. E. Botsford, acting relief administrator for Prince Georges County, said the opening of this work is expected to curtail drastically the normal September caseload increase.

This will mean, she said, that the main rush in September will be caused by applications for old-age pensions. The county as yet has no funds for this work.

Miss Botsford said the number of cases this month, with the usual relief from the harvesting season, is approximately that of last year.

She also announced that the situation will be helped some by the new CCC enrollment, which took 16 men from the relief rolls. These men will report Monday.

Sorrowing relatives and friends look on as the bodies of three Holy Cross nuns, killed in a crash Tuesday, are committed to their graves.

Placid, Dry-Eyed Nuns Attend Funeral of 3 Killed in Wreck

Sisters, Victims of Defense Highway Tragedy, Not Dead but Only at Beginning of Life, Bishop Says at Impressive Rites.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Clear, early morning sunlight filtered yesterday through the unstained glass windows of a plain little chapel at Holy Cross Academy, striking white fire from silver crucifixes which lay on three black coffins. All around were robes as somber as the coffins, black robes of the nuns who had come to attend last rites for three of their number.

Beneath those silver crucifixes, arranged in a row down the center aisle of the chapel, lay the crushed bodies of 21-year-old Sister Mary Bernard, who whispered her final vows only two weeks ago; 24-year-old Sister Frances Gabriel, and 24-year-old Sister Winifred Jean. All three young lives were snuffed out Tuesday afternoon in a bus-automobile crash on Defense highway.

Before a simple white altar, bare of flowers, the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, intoned requiem high mass. Back of him were relatives of the dead girls and, beyond them, row upon row of Sisters, their impassive faces framed in the starched white caps of their order.

"Only Beginning of Life."

As the requiem proceeded the sunlight advanced farther into the low-ceilinged room. It picked out pleated detail on the stiff white caps. It brought into relief the shining faces of the nuns, innocent of any expression save contentment and abiding peace. Their eyes were dry, their responses firm. They were not bidding a sad farewell to three they had known and loved. They were merely seeing them off on a last journey all must take.

The choir sang Missa pro Defunctis. Altar boys moved quietly to and fro. The rich fragrance of a matured summer, drifting in through half-opened windows, mingled with the heavy aroma of incense.

Bishop McNamara's assistants chanted the sonorous Latin words of the mass. Robes of the sisters rustled as beads were told, as the sign of the Cross was made. The bishop, in his brief sermon, said the three young women had not died but only now begun to live. The choir sang again. Sunlight found the bright green carpet, making it seem strangely verdant and alive.

Then it was all over.

The black coffins with their silver name plates and crucifixes were wheeled into a cool, shady room where candles burned. The sisters gathered in little groups in the academy's halls, whispering, talking, occasionally calmly smiling at something someone in the group said.

Relatives of Sister Mary Bernard and Sister Frances Gabriel went over to St. Gabriel's Church to attend funeral services for John McCarthy, their father.

The mother, sister and brothers of Sister Winifred Jean awaited at the academy until time to join Mr. McCarthy's funeral procession for the journey to Mount Olivet Cemetery. They had yet another ordeal before them. The body of another daughter in the family, Winifred Slavin, lay in its coffin at a funeral home. She, too, lost her life in the Defense highway crash. Her funeral will be held in her home town, Galesburg, Ill.

Suddenly the little groups became silent. It was time to take the bodies to Mount Olivet. The black coffins, borne by sturdy men with good Irish faces, led the quiet procession. Then came the sisters, black robed, black gloved, walking sedately two by two.

Earth Receives Them.

Past St. Gabriel's went the long cavalcade of silent cars. The hearse carrying Mr. McCarthy's coffin swung in back of the three black funeral cars carrying the bodies of the nuns.

Side by side the young women were buried. Nearby lay other nuns. And yesterday sisters stood around them, watching the coffins borne to the graves. The sun rose higher. The voice of the priest saying the burial service came in muffled tones to the crowd standing as close as it could get to the three openings in the earth. Many persons in that crowd had been waiting at the cemetery since 9 o'clock.

The sisters who had been so composed in the chapel, bit their lips, wiped their eyes. They watched the three coffins lowered to the level of the earth. Then they filed silently across the cemetery to see the father of two of the dead girls buried. It was noon. The hot sun, shining down, made the stark white caps look like halos.

Inquest Postponed

At the request of State's Attorney Alan Bowie, the inquest into the bus-auto crash on the Defense highway near Lanham, Md., last Tuesday which took five lives, was postponed until next Friday.

The sole defendant to appear before the jury will be Curtis G. Mason, of Ballston, Va., driver of the bus.

Bomber to Seek New Record Today

By the Associated Press.

Langley Field, Va., Aug. 23.—Postponed because of poor visibility, the attempt of general headquarters air force aviators to set a new world speed record for seaplanes in a Martin bomber is scheduled to get under way here again about 7 or 7:30 a. m. tomorrow, general headquarters officers said tonight.

Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, commanding the general headquarters force, was at the controls when the plane took off at 7:45 a. m. He returned, however, to the post a half hour later, reporting that visibility was too poor to continue the flight. Weather forecasts tonight were favorable for resumption of the attempt tomorrow.

Whether Gen. Andrews will take the stick again was not definitely stated.

The course is 1,000 kilometers long and includes as its corners Willoughby Spit, in Hampton Roads; Floyd Bennett Field, New York, and Bolling Field, Washington.

Treasure Hunter Dies in Baltimore

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 23.—Funeral services were held today for Captain Harry L. Bowdoin, 66, organizer of a deep-sea diving and salvage company which recently attempted to retrieve $6,000,000 in treasure from the sunken liner Merida.

Captain Bowdoin died early yesterday at his home here, on the eve of another attempt to reach the treasure. He was to have left Baltimore for Norfolk yesterday to outfit another salvage ship. His son, Lawrence, said that it was possible that he might continue his father's salvage work.

The death of Capt. Bowdoin was attributed to heart disease. Although he had figured in numerous salvage jobs, his greatest interest lay in the Merida, which lies in 210 feet of water off the Virginia Capes. At the last attempt to salvage her treasure, a diver in special apparatus penetrated to the liner's strong room, but was unable to open it.

Opening Put Off At High School In Alexandria

New George Washington May Be Ready by Sept. 16, Superintendent Says

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The date of opening of the new George Washington High School has been delayed until September 16, according to an announcement yesterday by T. C. Williams, school superintendent. There has been some delay in the installation of equipment, but it is hoped by Mr. Williams to open it on the date mentioned. The registration date for the new school has been set for September 11, when the secretary to the principal will make the registrations.

On September 5, the Washington-Lee, Jefferson, Maury, Mount Vernon, Parker-Gray and Seminary Hill schools will open. The opening of the new colored school, known as the Lyles-Crouch School, has been indefinitely delayed, as the conversion of the building has not been completed.

It is announced that grades which have been transferred to other buildings will meet in the rooms used last year, and receive instructions as to where to report. The opening of the new high school and consequent use of the old Alexandria and George Mason High Schools for the lower grades has necessitated many changes in attendance zones.

The principals of the various schools, except the new high school and the new colored school, will meet in a conference with the superintendent of schools at 9:30 a. m., September 4, in the old Alexandria High School.

For enrollment in the first low grade, pupils must be 6 years old on or before September 1, and must present birth certificates before they can be enrolled.

Principals will arrange within their own buildings to issue rental textbooks to those entitled to participate in the rental scheme. This applies to all pupils who have received books under this scheme in the past and have received approved contracts stating that the requirements have been complied with.

Luther W. High, Washington ice cream manufacturer, was fined $300 and costs in Police Court yesterday on a charge of violating a city ordinance which requires the butterfat content of ice cream sold in Alexandria to register not less than 12 per cent. High operates three retail stores here. The charge was filed by the city health department.

A motion to dismiss on the ground that the city ordinance is unconstitutional, in that it attempts to supersede a State statute, was overruled. The State law is understood to require a minimum butterfat content of only 10 per cent.

Henry P. Thomas, attorney, appearing for High, noted an appeal to the Corporation Court.

Traffic Drive Crowds Docket In Montgomery

Twenty Violators Forfeit Fines in County Police Court.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post,
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Evidence of Montgomery County's campaign for stricter traffic-law enforcement was afforded in County Police Court yesterday as a crowded docket of automobile violations confronted Judge Harold C. Smith.

The majority of the offenders, who numbered about 20 in all, did not appear in court, but elected to forfeit collateral instead, following the lead of Judge Smith in his now famous overtime parking case.

The heaviest fine, which totaled $110 for two charges, with the alternative of 40 days in jail, was meted out in the form of a suspended sentence for Grant E. Lantz, of Clarendon, Va., who was convicted of drunken driving and operating without a permit, although cleared of a charge of unauthorized use of a motor car.

The sentences, the minimum allowable for the offenses, were suspended by Judge Smith after giving him a lecture in which he said the one condition of the suspension was that the defendant not return to Maryland.

A fine of $10 for driving without a license and another of $5 for failure to stop at a "stop" sign were meted out to Joshua Matthews.

The third arrest in western Montgomery County on the charge of carrying concealed weapons occurred yesterday when Deputy Sheriff Frank Soper, aided by Constable Jake Davis, arrested Raymond Crittenden, 35, of 518 First street southeast, Washington.

Crittenden was released on $500 bond with his trial set for Monday.

Child health conferences in two Montgomery County communities will be held Wednesday, it was announced yesterday by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer. The first will be held at Montrose School at 10 a. m., and the afternoon session will be at Derwood School at 2 p. m.

Babies and pre-school children will be examined and may be inoculated to prevent diphtheria and vaccinated at this time. Miss Hermine Badenhoop is in charge of arrangements at Montrose, and Mrs. Brigham and Mrs. Cecil at Derwood. A physician appointed by the medical society will make the examinations.

C. W. Duff, who has recently returned to the United States from missionary work in Africa, will speak on "Ethiopia and the Gospel," at the Silver Spring Baptist Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. services. Mr. Duff will return to the Sudan Interior Mission early next month.

Virginia Judgeship Situation Uncertain

President May Act in Time for Senate Approval.

By the Associated Press.

Whether Attorney General Homer Cummings would make his Virginia judgeship recommendations to the President and whether the President would announce the appointment in time for Senate confirmation at this session of Congress were questions for speculation here last night.

Not an inkling of what was to be expected, however, was to be found at the Department of Justice, where the eleventh delegation urging recommendation of as many candidates appeared before the Attorney General yesterday.

With State Senator William A. Wright, of Tappahannock, as its chairman, yesterday's delegation presented the candidacy of W. W. Beverly, the fourth Richmond man to be recommended to the Attorney General.

Gaming Count Brings 3 Fines In County Raid

Upper Marlboro Inflicts Penalties as Accused Plead Guilty.

Three men, arrested after a raid on an alleged gambling house at Silver Hill, Md., last July 21, were fined yesterday in the Upper Marlboro police court.

Theodore A. Meyers paid $50 for maintaining a gambling table, while Bernard Fitzgerald, of Washington, paid $75 for operating a gambling table.

Emmett Meyers, who was charged with assaulting Prince Georges County Policeman Elon Turner and Deputy Game Warden Frank Burroughs, who made the raid, was fined $75.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie said he originally planned to ask for a jury trial for the men, but he said yesterday he reversed his decision when the men agreed to plead guilty.

The place raided was known as the Green Oaks Country Club. Turner and Burroughs entered the establishment about 2 a. m., Sunday morning (July 21) "looking for gambling."

On the first floor Turner said they found only a drinking establishment, in full operation. Forcing their way to the second floor they found a lively gambling house in operation, they declared.

The occupants, however, objected to being raided and set upon the officers. Both were severely beaten about the head. The police succeeded in getting away with one prisoner. Returning they confiscated a quantity of alleged gambling equipment.

10,000 Public Enemies

Chapter XXXV—Woman of Blood (Part 2)

Mrs. Lester Gillis, the wife of Baby Face Nelson, also was given her freedom on a probationary sentence because she was a woman. She waited only until Baby Face established contact with her and then was away again. This woman was the mother of two children; perhaps that was why leniency was shown in her case. The records display no effort on her part to go to those children. Instead, at the first possible moment, she hurried back into the company of the baby-faced rat whose bravery consisted mainly of shooting before somebody could fire toward him, and she was with him in the final battle when he was killed. She went to prison as the result of that, sullen, defiant, still a "gang moll."

Blame Comes Back To Public Opinion.

Marie Conforti was in the same crowd; she was Homer Van Meter's woman. She, too, went to her man at the first possible opportunity after she had been released and she remained with him until the day he was killed. Some of these women had been given their chance before. Frechette was arrested with Dillinger in Tucson and freed there. So was Conforti. The truth is that police, district attorneys and even judges know that the excuse of innocence used so effectively by this type of woman is only a ruse. Police free them because they feel district attorneys will not file charges against them. District attorneys free them because they know that a jury won't convict. And judges give clemency because public opinion demands it. So, just like everything else, the blame settles right back to where it belongs—at the feet of you who happen to be reading this story.

Thus, with all obeisance to chivalry, it must be repeated that women in crime are highly dangerous animals. They do not desire any other life. They do not merely dip into a criminal career, but pursue it with all the desperate fervor exhibited by the most dangerous of their consorts.

As for the men concerned, Frank Nash received clemency twice—once for a murder charge and once for bank robbery. Doc Barker was paroled from a life sentence after he had escaped twice from captivity and had been convicted of murder. Alvin Karpis received clemency. Baby Face Nelson had been paroled twice.

John Dillinger was paroled, and within a few days after his freedom, spent hours in throwing automatic pistols, incased in tar to break their fall, over the walls of Indiana State Penitentiary in an effort to aid a prison break. In nearly every kidnaping case investigated by the bureau there were one or more paroled criminals.

The parole record of Gov. W. H. Murray's administration in Oklahoma, from his inauguration in January, 1931, to December, 1934, covers 125 single-spaced typewritten pages of foolscap paper. Of what these records consist is best told by a summation in the Tulsa (Okla.) World of December 8, 1934.

It shows that 9 persons convicted of narcotic violations were released on parole, also 14 who had been sent to prison for perjury, 9 for bigamy, 12 for desertion and 90 for forgery. Five hundred and eight sentenced on liquor charges had their sentences cut, as did 122 who had been convicted of rape. Freedom was given 384 persons who had committed larceny, and 52 others who had tried to commit murder were turned loose.

Seventeen persons serving terms for arson received clemency. So did 85 committed for fraud, 38 for assault and 56 for car theft. In the more serious class, 375 convicts serving terms for burglary were freed, 315 for robbery, and clemency was provided in 356 cases where the convicts had been convicted of murder.

'Ma' Ferguson Enters Parole Sweepstakes.

As if to protest against any claims for championship by Oklahoma in the parole sweepstakes, there comes a dispatch from Texas, purporting to give that honor to Gov. "Ma" Ferguson's administration:

"During the two years which ended with January 15, 1935, Mrs. Ferguson's acts of clemency reached a grand total of 5,142. Of these, 533 were full and unconditional pardons, 1,564 were conditional pardons, 896 were paroles and 1,227 were furloughs. In the last two weeks of her administration there were 445 acts of clemency."

All this must not be understood as a tirade against the theory of parole, but against the abuse of that theory. Politics, loose methods of supervision, overworked parole officers, pressure of various kinds; all these things are doing the theory of parole more harm than anything else that could be devised. The public righteously believes that parole should be restricted to convicts who have domonstrated their ability to reform, and that once they fail at this reform, they should not again be eligible for this sort of freedom.

The files of the Bureau of Investigation show thousands upon thousands of convicts who have been paroled and re-paroled. Here is a typical example:

Case No. 116942 was received at the State Reformatory, Pontiac, Ill., on February 17, 1930, for burglary and larceny to serve a sentence of one year to life. He was paroled on April 2, 1932, which parole he violated. He was arrested by the Police Department, St. Louis, Mo., on February 11, 1933, as suspect. He was arrested by the Police Department, Los Angeles, Calif., as Earl T. Sexton, on March 7, 1934, as a suspect in a robbery. He was arrested by the Police Department, Long Beach, Calif., on March 8, 1934, for investigation of grand theft (robbery and kidnaping). On March 15, 1934, he was arrested by the sheriff's office, Los Angeles, Calif., on charges of robbery. A notation appearing in the file indicates that on March 1, 1934, he was arrested at Los Angeles on charges of suspicion of robbery, kidnaping and rape.

It Can Not Be Final.

During the prolonged fight over the death sentence in the utilities holding company bill several Congressmen have shown themselves worthy of the best traditions of parliamentary government. The issue was one which tested the mettle of legislators more severely than any other recent legislation. The fact that a majority in the House finally surrendered to a disguised "death sentence" does not reduce the stature attained by Representative Huddleston and some other champions of holding company regulation as opposed to ruthless and unreasonable destruction.

In a masterful address, which summarized the position of the regulation advocates, Mr. Huddleston pointed out that the so-called compromise is merely a vote-catching trap. Its purpose, he said, "is to give weak-kneed brethren a chance to repent. It is an affront to the dignity and self-respect of every man who voted against the death sentence."

But wavering members were subjected to terrific pressure. As Representative Cooper said, they had Government lobbyists continuously at their elbows. They were deluged by hypocritical propaganda and sensational generalizations based on the testimony of officials of a single discredited utilities company. And finally they were urged, at the end of a nerve-wracking session, to "clean up this nasty mess and see that it is not carried into the campaign of 1936." In the circumstances it is not surprising that the compromise trick succeeded.

It is impossible to believe, however, that this decision will be considered final. The House is emphatically opposed to destruction under the pretense of regulation. When that body comes to realize that the Administration has not essentially modified the death sentence, but only changed executioners, the issue undoubtedly will be revived. Under the guidance of such leaders as Mr. Huddleston a rational revision may be confidently expected.

"This compromise proposal," the Alabama Congressman said, "is like imposing a death sentence on a man and then granting him a reprieve on condition that he will eat a keg of nails each morning for breakfast." Only three or four utility holding companies in the entire country, he contends, can survive the measure. To bestow such powers of destruction upon a Federal commission is too sweeping a delegation of power to be accepted. Long before death warrants can be issued by the bewildered Securities and Exchange Commission the issue will unquestionably have to be threshed out all over again.

Figs From Thistles?

Passage of the Guffey coal bill came in recognition of the desperate plight of this important industry. Convincing arguments of both a constitutional and economic nature were advanced against the legislation. It is impossible not to be skeptical of the measure on both of these counts. But the chaos within the industry is so acute that all opposition, reasonable and unreasonable, was finally brushed aside in an attempt to afford relief.

Nobody with any knowledge of the soft-coal industry can deny that it is not merely appropriate, but essential, for the Administration actively to concern itself with the chaotic conditions there prevalent. They form the subject matter of numerous official reports, such as that made by the United States Coal Commission twelve years ago, such as the evidence collected by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in 1928 and by the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining in 1932. The recent report of the National Resources Board, not to mention shelves of other dependable data, shows that of late the waste of resources, the cut-throat competition, the superfluous production and the labor unrest have all grown more serious. The collapse of the NRA code alone would have merited careful governmental consideration for the problems of this basic industry.

Whether Senator Guffey's measure will solve this problem, however, is a different matter. It is a curious fallacy of the times to assume, in spite of abundant evidence to the contrary, that mere transference of authority to the Government can of itself cure complicated economic and social problems. Altogether too little attention was given to the probable efficacy of the bill in bringing about results that everyone desires.

Critics of the measure will now hope that it may improve the deplorable conditions under which the coal industry is operating. But until the figs of stability are actually gathered from this legislative thistle, skepticism will persist.

The Social Security Board.

On the administrative ability of the Social Security Board, the membership of which was named by the President yesterday, will depend in large measure successful operation of the gigantic experiment in unemployment and old-age insurance on which the country is now embarked. Mr. Roosevelt has shown due appreciation of the responsibility resting on the new agency in the personnel which, subject to Senate approval, he has selected.

Appointment of John G. Winant as chairman of the board is particularly gratifying. The President has not merely shown admirable disregard for political considerations in naming this Republican to the key position. He also has selected a man whose qualifications for the important work ahead are above criticism.

In his three terms as Governor of New Hampshire, Mr. Winant showed unusual administrative skill and won wide repute for the success of his reforms in the interest of economy and efficiency. He achieved national prominence for his skillful chairmanship of the cotton textile inquiry last year. And more lately he has extended his reputation even more widely as assistant director of the International Labor Office at Geneva, which post he has held since last April.

From the viewpoint of the I. L. O. it is unfortunate that Mr. Winant should be terminating services which are barely well under way—the social security act properly provides that members of its administrative board shall engage in no other "business, vocation or employment." But there is no comparison between the opportunity for immediate constructive accomplishment in the two positions, and even if this youthful former Governor were deaf to reports that he should be considered among budding presidential possibilities, he would have been foolish to refuse the proffered post.

The second nomination to the Social Security Board is scarcely less admirable. Arthur J. Altmeyer, now Second Assistant Secretary of Labor, was formerly labor commissioner of Wisconsin and served as chairman of the technical board of the committee on economic security which did the spade-work for the social security act. As an expert in the very complicated field of social insurance he should be able to supplement Mr. Winant's executive skill with well-rounded specialized knowledge.

With the name of the third appointee, Vincent M. Miles, enthusiasm wanes. Before 1933, except for the war period, he was a Democratic national committeeman from Arkansas. Obviously the President has not been entirely immunized from political urgings in appointing the Social Security Board. But while Mr. Miles seems to have no outstanding qualifications for his new post he has been given only the short-term appointment. And his extensive legal training should be very useful in the difficult initial stages of administration.

Nothing can at this time be more helpful to the country than an efficient and economical social insurance program, so operated as to remove as soon as possible the whole spendthrift, demoralizing and completely fatuous system of emergency relief. Nothing would be more disastrous than a social security flop on the heels of the CWA and WPA orgies. The new board, reflects, it may be hoped, a presidential realization that further bungling with the unemployment problem will be disastrous beyond any possibility of concealment.

It was Aldous Huxley's imagination which let loose on the mechanical wombs in which generations of the future may be produced. He anticipated a regulation of prenatal conditions which would fit baby dear for his preordained duties in later life. And he warned that if a future Farley appointee should inadvertently omit scheduled treatment of a retort in which was developing a human destined for service in the tropics, 40 years later that man would succumb to a jungle fever against which he should have been immune.

The fantasy comes to mind in the light of certain inexplicable behavior on the part of men in positions of legislative responsibility.

In Congress recently Senator Johnson rose to object to the munitions control bill when it was offered on the unanimous consent calendar. He was, of course, within his rights in so doing. Still, this carefully prepared measure had run the gamut of all reasonable criticism and there was every reason to believe it would pass the full assembly without further debate. What doubts lurked in the mind of the Senator? What quirk, and how acquired, prompted him to object without explanation when 95 of his colleagues approved the bill?

Again, when the bill to restore the leave privileges of Government employes was presented on Thursday, Senator McKellar blocked action with his "I object!" The contrary opinion of the entire Congress stood for nothing. Some rare influence, some unusual force must have sometime played on the Senator from Tennessee to render him thus obstinately adamant.

It is a startling thought. Just as the nursery rhyme tells of the kingdom that was lost for lack of a horseshoe nail, so the course of the Nation may be changed by some juvenile repression of one man who later develops into a Senator empowered to prevent legislation by his single voice. Perhaps, more than a chaplain, the Senate should have a psychiatrist to open its proceedings.

"Now, Hiram," he might warn, "—— and you, too, Kenneth," he could add, "don't let any unjust spanking you may have received in childhood unwittingly influence your attitude today!"

The Cotton Subsidy.

The AAA's attempt to circumvent the cotton problem by a tortuous route is all too typical of the present course of American Government. Instead of squarely facing the consequences of an unsound policy, the Administration is making a desperate effort to please every one by writing another blank check against future tax receipts.

Continuation of the 12-cent loan on cotton would have been economically disastrous. Last year the Government lent $237,982,000 under that arrangement, of which only $3,339,000 has been repaid. Instead of selling their cotton, farmers secured Federal loans, leaving the AAA to worry about the disposition of some 4,600,000 bales held as collateral. The result has been that American cotton exports fell 36 per cent in volume during the marketing season just closed. Foreign production has been greatly stimulated, and the position which the United States has occupied for many years in the world cotton market is jeopardized. From the economic viewpoint a change of policy was imperative.

On the other hand, Southern Senators were quick to detect the seeds of political calamity in any retreat from 12-cent cotton. The market price had already fallen below the loan value, and with other countries greatly increasing their cotton output, there was reason to fear a collapse in prices which would alienate many embittered votes.

Recourse to the third alternative—the use of Treasury funds as a direct subsidy for cotton growers—was easy. The new policy is designed to stimulate the movement of cotton, since loans will be limited to 9 cents per pound. At the same time, farmers will be propitiated by the addition of outright gifts to benefit payments and Government loans. Only taxpayers will feel the burden, and even for them its weight will be minimized, until the Government has the courage squarely to confront its steadily mounting obligations. In other words, the whole problem has been dismissed with another casual draft upon posterity.

The decision is the more astonishing because it follows by one day an emphatic rejection of cotton subsidies by the Cabinet committee which recently concluded a study of the textile industry. Premiums intended to stimulate exports were disapproved by this group because of the "possible retaliatory measures which might be taken in foreign countries against such subsidy." Probably this advice accounts for the elaborate camouflaging of the new subsidy plan, but the underlying inconsistency is none the less evident.

Within the next few months the Administration may expect other agricultural groups to be knocking at its door, demanding similar gratuities. How can the AAA consistently refuse, especially on the eve of an election? Aside from evolving positively dangerous practices from half-baked theory, the Administration has set up a precedent that may prove far more embarrassing than 9-cent cotton. It is by just such surrender of principles to opportunism that democratic governments of the past have been destroyed.

Insidious Albion.

To those who sniff at the theory of environment, the recent transatlantic broadcast of former Mayor James J. Walker must have been a shock. The London program brought the one-time playboy's voice to this country for the first time since his self-exile in 1933. Living in a seventeenth century inn at Dorking, England, the former burgermeister has repeatedly announced his complete alienation from the bright lights of Broadway. Reading, explorations of rustic villages, and hikes in the Surrey hills fill that part of the life of J. J. Walker, Esquire, which is unoccupied by opening letters from the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

However, it was not definitely known until his voice came through the ether just how much his surroundings have affected the wisecracker of yore. A radio functionary, who had heard Walker many times before, said that if the announcer hadn't announced, he would never have recognized the cultured accents.

The customary British means of establishing contact by saying "Are you theyah?" was omitted from Jimmy's greeting, but he did substitute "post" for mail, and "chump" for sap. Following which, by one of those coincidences which do happen, the portrait of Mr. Walker in New York's National Democratic Club was moved from the proletarian lobby to the exclusive board of governors' room.

A Jump Ahead Of The Extremists.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer.

By raising again the price of newly mined silver President Roosevelt has thrown a sop to politicians from the silver States, perhaps with the object of blocking more definitely inflationary silver legislation. Yet a Senate committee has been quick to report favorably Senator Wheeler's 16-to-1 silver bill which, by a mandatory increase in the silver base, holds the potentialities of wide-scale cheapening of money.

Except for its theoretical assistance in forcing generally higher commodity prices, there has never been much rhyme or reason in the Administration's silver juggling from an economic standpoint. Its implications in large part have been political, and the latest increase to 71.12 cents per fine ounce is in keeping with the President's former tactics on silver as well as with his strategy wherever radical demands are involved. . . .

In silver, as in a variety of other issues, the President displays his ability to stay a jump or two ahead of the demands of the extremists. That the feat is not being performed without dangerous concessions and compromises is evident.

Maybe I'd Better Close It.

Serious Or Absurd?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A couple of local newspaper columnists have made valiant effort to eclaircise the company in which Marvin McIntyre found himself the other night in a well-known hotel, thus showing acute appreciation of past favors and high hopes for the future. Even the impeccable Senator from Louisiana granted the right of the President's secretary to choose his own company for a dinner party, whether or not lobbyists were in the group.

All this being allowed, what explanation can be offered for the bellicose manner of the one who threatened the job of the reporter who dared to tell of the delightful gathering?

The testimony of the lobby as to payments made to members of the high command in the Democratic Party prompted a natural curiosity of executive assistants to look at the men who controlled such funds. If they served good dinners they were merely trying to revive an honored custom almost forgotten in Washington. Some guests left with boxes of cigars at one such function which subsequently gave rise to the slogan: "Huh, them weren't cigars."

Association is the standard ever since the old Spaniard said, "Tell me your company and I'll tell you who you are." And then from Matthew we learn that a man can not serve two masters, followed by the words of wisdom: Where a man's treasure is, there is his heart also.

Is the case serious or is it absurd?

HILARY HOBBS.

The Leave Bills.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Who is right? The center of contention in the two leave bills for Federal employes now pending in the Senate is the employes in the mail equipment shop. The chairman of the House Civil Service Committee says we are asking for too much when we ask for 30 days' annual leave and 15 days' sick leave, plus the 40-hour week.

His reason given for his stand is that his constituents down in Georgia are field employes and they get 15 days' annual leave and 10 days' sick leave. That is what we of the mail equipment shops contend they should have if we, the employes in the District, whether we be field or departmental employes, receive but 30 days' annual leave.

We would like to ask the chairman of the committee just how much money does one of his consituents have to pay out, or how much time does he sacrifice of his 15 days' annual leave going to and from home if he should happen to be called to the bedside of some of his people if they should become ill? It is our belief that over 80 per cent of the employes in the Postal Service throughout the United States are employes at their home or within the immediate vicinity, with a few hours' drive and practically no cost to them whatsoever, would carry them to the bedside of an ill relative. While there are a number of employes in our department, as well as myself, whose home folks are west of the Rockies, it requires from five to ten days to and from there plus the cost of $100 to $150.

We believe if the records be searched, it can be found that when the lawmakers started to settle the question of vacation time granted Federal employes, they made these differentials of 15 and 30 days not with the idea of dollars and cents, but for the purpose of being as fair to one group of employes as the other.

J. A. B.

Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial recently regarding the restoration of the Federal employes' leave to 15 days, taking that amount off the sick leave, was right to the point. But it seems while the House has favorably reported out the leave bill, the Senate has fallen down on that most important job for the welfare of Federal employes. One would think that such a spell of intense heat as has prevailed in this city for week after week while the Senators have had to stay and suffer in it, might warm up their hearts enough to cause some action on that leave bill!

Let us hope that that bill will be one of the "must" and not musty, bills to receive attention.

Yours for a "New Deal" for Federal workers. ONE OF THEM.

Forgotten Gentleman?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with mingled emotions Elsa Maxwell's list of "The World's Ten Greatest Gentlemen" in The Post of August 15. The list was interesting in view of the qualifications which she used as a test of admission to her supercircle. I condensed them:

He cannot support a family.
He cannot be an artist.
He cannot be an author. Authors sometimes tell the truth.
He must not dress too well.
He cannot be a member of royalty.

But what makes me sore is that she finds no room in a list composed of pianists, head cooks, bankers, actors, champagne magnates and the Chief Justice of the United States, to head, foot or interpolate the name of the President of the United States.

Reply To Samuel Crowther.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If another political party is to be formed let it be called the Confusionist Party with Samuel Crowther running for President. Mr. Crowther, in The Post, of August 17, places our advanced social thinkers on a shelf and advances his recommendations for social security. I would agree with him if his conclusion were based on true logic and real historical and economic facts. He fails, however, on all three hurdles.

Mr. Crowther strikes a foul ball in the first inning by divorcing European thought and practice from American thought and practice. If an idea is beneficial to the majority does it matter where the idea originated? When Marconi invented the radio, according to Mr. Crowther, we should have raised our tariff walls and not allowed such European thought and practice to enter our good old American soil. If such were the case, we would still be burning oil and riding our old-fashioned buggies.

Mr. Crowther beats around the bush but gets scratched up when he bandies the two words "security" and "opportunity." Where in the world does not one crave security? It means the ability to sustain life. The word "opportunity" is translatable in as many languages as there are nations.

Of the 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 people that would derive benefits from a real security bill, how many have the opportunity of entering the golden portals of the leisure, moneyed class? Very, very few. Why confuse the minds of your readers by playing with such words as "opportunity" and "security?" Every worker wants the opportunity to be secure, and if that is denied him then he must look for the true causes. If so many people need security then, certainly, security is a social necessity. And if social security is denied these millions, then we ought to send the men in the White House along with their Wall street sponsors on a long fishing trip.

What kind of a Government have we that cannot legislate security? If Mr. Crowther should worry about such a bill being constitutional, please call for a vote among those individuals who need this security. They'll make it constitutional, and with all that wealth, we'll make it go around more than once.

Again Mr. Crowther "splits hairs." It must be a game. He uses the words "involuntary poverty" and "voluntary poverty." This economic system with its new and latest mechanical equipment will never be able to reemploy those millions it has thrown out of work. Workers want jobs and a decent living wage, not relief which lowers their living standards and demoralizes them. It is an old but false phrase to call people shiftless and lazy when they are unemployed or on relief. People are unemployed due to no fault of their own.

Thinking such as Mr. Crowther's very neatly paves the way for forced labor. He doesn't use the words "forced labor," because it doesn't sound nice. All in all it means exactly that. Forced labor cannot replace that social and unemployment security bill, H. R. 2827. The idea of forcing the "voluntary paupers" to work is an unforgivable thought and shows a contempt for the unemployed worker. At the same time, if "involuntary paupers" refuse the low wage rates offered, in Mr. Crowther's opinion, these workers would be classified as "voluntary paupers." What he does is use one very small group as a spearhead to force the rest to accept his forced labor idea. Herr Hitler is a step ahead of Mr. Crowther in this.

Mr. Crowther contradicts himself by saying "the unemployment insurance feature is not of present moment," and yet just a little further he says "the big question today is to prevent depressions and unemployment . . ." Then it is a present moment feature!

Bathers Beware?

Postoffice, Saturday.

THE shark-doctors continue to disagree. Dr. Beebe sticks to his belief that sharks aren't in the habit of biting people. Dr. Burton collects sufficient data to indicate, to many minds, the reverse.

You know who Dr. Beebe is: Wm. daring deep-sea explorer, director of the Department of Scientific Research of the New York Zoological Society. You ought to know who Dr. Burton is: he is director of the Charleston, S. C., Museum.

Accurately speaking, there are, in regard to this moot question, three schools of thought involving two schools of fish:

(1) The shark is innocent.
(2) The shark is guilty.
(3) If the shark is guilty, he isn't a shark—he's a barracuda.

"SHARK: Any of numerous fishes . . ." Webster.
"BARRACUDA: Any of several voracious pikelike marine fishes . . ." Webster (again).

And, adds this peace-loving lexicographer, "the larger (sharks) are often dangerous to man . . . the great barracuda of the West Indies, Florida, etc., is often . . . as dangerous as a shark."

That doesn't get us very far does it?

But Drs. Gudger and Nicols, of the American Museum of Natural History, in Dr. Beebe's home-town, move us on a bit.

Lewis Kornahrens was standing in waist-deep water at Folly Island, near Charleston, when "a fish grabbed on both leggs." Lewis fought to freedom, but his wound required 100 stitches at the Roper Hospital, and a piece of tooth left behind by "the fish" was sent to Gudger and Nicols. The former reported:

"This is not a barracuda tooth . . . Mr. Nicols and I are both satisfied that it is a fragment of a shark's tooth, and we are inclined to think that it is from one of the mackerel-sharks."

Dr. Burton admits that "authentic records of persons bitten by sharks while bathing along the Atlantic Coast north of Florida" are by no means frequent, notwithstanding such as the well-known New Jersey one of 1916; but he intimates that they increased during the last decade. Moreover, when he latterly marshaled his instances for the Scientific Monthly—by way of which we quote him—he was able to produce "several well authenticated cases of attacks upon bathers" along the South Carolina shore. And there, says he, "the barracuda is apparently very rare."

Carefully putting aside all episodes when the fish was not seen, he details, with the names of the attending surgeons, assaults when it was seen:

Drayton Hastie, bathing at Morris Island, Charleston Harbor, in three feet of water. First right leg torn, then left. Wounds, requiring 30 stitches, formed "a perfect design of a shark's mouth." Attacker seen by both Hastie and a friend ashore. Probably a yellow or cub shark.

Kenneth Layton, bathing at Pawley's Island, 75 miles north of Charleston. Flat beach, four feet of water. Rescued by friends from the jaws of a shark, which, however, cut several tendons, including the Achilles tendon.

C. B. Hernadez, swimming in a 15-feet deep inlet near Coles Island. Bitten by a shark, but beat it off. The shark also seen by a friend standing on the nearby wharf. The scars "are in crescentic form."

W. E. Davis—of the Officers' Reserve Corps, now on duty at Florida White Sulphur Springs CCC Camps—had a brush with a shark in James Island Sound and tells his own story:

"I dove from the wharf and had gone probably 30 yards when my left foot was seized. My involuntary reaction was to jerk practically clear of the water, and I succeeded in ripping my foot clear . . . I saw the white of a shark's stomach and the tip of its tail . . . Fortunately, I reached the wharf very shortly . . .

"I had no warning whatsoever. Further, the water that afternoon was exceptionally clear, so that the shark could not have been mistaken as to what it was attacking. Also, I was swimming vigorously and making quite a commotion in the water . . ."

These excerpts give you some idea of Dr. Burton's evidence. And Dr. Burton "is an honorable man."

"So are they all honorable men," including Dr. Beebe. Yet Dr. Beebe says—well, you know what he says.

Of course, all of Dr. Burton's instances may be exceptions to a rule. But who's to say when an exception is not going to occur?

* * *

Ourselves, we used to know Dr. Beebe, during our New York days. We admire and trust him. But, just the same, we wouldn't trust a shark.

What of the Money Changers?

New York, Aug. 23.

WHEN Congress adjourns and Mr. Roosevelt at last has a few minutes that he can call his own perhaps he will be good enough to call up Mr. Cummings at the Department of Justice and ask him the score to date in the case of the people against the money changers.

It has been two years and more since the bank holiday was declared, and some of the banks which were closed at that time have not reopened. If a bank is so insolvent that it can not reopen in two years, then the insolvency probably will have to be regarded as permanent. Of course, mere insolvency need not bespeak misdoing, but, on the other hand, it might and in many cases did.

Anyway, many of our citizens would still be interested in a little daily box in the paper—perhaps somewhat on the order of the standing of the ball clubs—giving the number of banks investigated, indictments, prosecutions, acquittals, convictions and length of terms imposed, together with a composite figure representing the batting average of the Department of Justice.

Time is a great healer, and some of the saving people who trusted their money to the banks which closed, apparently forever, have forgotten by now that there ever was such a thing as money. But there are a few elephants among the losers, including one who sends out to a large mailing list every year, in lieu of a Christmas card, a plaintive and vindicitive brochure, not at all in the holiday spirit, entitled "Why isn't my banker in prison?"

• • • •

IT takes the most delicate timing to determine the precise instant when a bank ceases to be solvent and becomes insolvent, or busted. It is like trying to define the instant when a person ceases to be awake and is asleep. Yet a banker assumes an obligation to do just this and to slap down the window and run up the white flag, refusing to accept another dollar of the people's money at the exact moment when he is no longer in a position to pay off. Many financiers of that day obviously continued to accept the neighbors' savings at a time when they had a reasonable doubt of their ability to keep going. This would have been felonious conduct.

Certainly it was a familiar story in the days when the banks were popping like toy balloon on New Year's Eve that this or that honest toiler went down to the corner and shoved in a few bills against the mortgage or the rainy day, only to discover next morning that the bank blew up an hour later.

That was cutting the time pretty fine.

I may be wrong in assuming that all such cases are Federal matters, but the Department of Justice has been so active in the pursuit and extinction of people who rob banks that it seems reasonable to expect the same authority and zeal in the cases of banks which rob people.

• • • •

AT any rate, the Department of Justice, while it has been quite confiding, not to say garrulous, about the achievements of its fly-cops, the G-men and dead-eye dicks, in analyzing cigarette ashes and reading footprints for clews to catch the red-neck type of criminal, has been remarkably bashful about its achievement, if any, in the less spectacular field of prosecution. With the local police forces so largely composed of small-town loafers and former high school half backs who like to ride motorcycles and toss their locks at lady drivers, the necessity for a Federal police force is readily conceded, and the plain clothesmen under Edgar Hoover are to be congratulated on their success against the rural bad men who were setting the laws pretty much at naught a while ago.

But in the romantic excitement over the exploits of the young King Bradys and Nick Carters of Mr. Hoover's command there has been a loud modesty on the part of the legal department charged with the duty of hiding away those white-collar brigands whom Mr. Roosevelt, in one address to Congress, likened to the kidnaper and bandit.

Mr. Roosevelt in that oration was so outspoken and apparently so angry at this type of larcenist that many of the people are justified now in joining the inquiry of the man with the long memory who demands to know each yuletide why his banker hasn't yet been put up for membership with Al Capone at Alcatraz.

After all, the pursuit of automobile thieves and stick-up men, though now a legitimate duty of the department in the general surrender of autonomy and responsibility by the States and towns to the Federal Government, is still only a minor activity of the Department of Justice. Prosecution of the erring financier, and preferably successful prosecution, is more important, because, after all, the whole roster of the Dillingers, Baileys and Karpises never accounted for as much grief and loss as one first-rate banker of the kind that Mr. Roosevelt so vigorously deplored.

The Department of Justice has an able press agent, as the reputation of the so-called G-men proves, and he would have no trouble finding space close to pure reading matter for a periodic posting of the roster of the money changers who have gone away, not forgetting to mention for how long.

Plays Into Books

By William Lyon Phelps

AS we can not all go to New York to see the new plays, and as we can not see them all in community and summer theaters, it is well to read them, in order to find out what is taking place on the American stage. Now, there is no field of art in which Americans have made such progress as in the theater; if one compares the list of living playwrights with those active in 1900, the advance is amazing.

Have you tried to read the popular plays of 1900? It is not easy to read them as one would read literature, as one reads Ibsen or Shaw or Barrie.

• • • •

But our contemporary American playwrights have given us dramas that are well worth serious study and are certainly interesting to read. Many reading clubs would do well to spend a year on the study of contemporary plays in book form. Eugene O'Neill, Sidney Howard, Philip Barry, Elmer Rice, Maxwell Anderson, Marc Connelly, DuBose Heyward, George S. Kaufman, S. N. Behrman, Rachel Crothers, to name only a few, seem unafraid of literary criticism, and are adding to the original literature of the stage.

The novel "Porgy," dramatized by Mr. and Mrs. Heyward, is now available in the Modern Library edition, and it should be read, because the opera "Porgy," by George Gershwin, promises to be the sensation of the coming season.

As Italy Sees It

Fascists Look Upon Ethiopia As Only Solution For Domestic Problems.

By George Marvin.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ETHICALLY little or nothing can be said from any point of view to justify the Italian program in East Africa. Economically and in the realm of Welt Politik a strong case can be made out for it—from the Italian point of view.

Most of us forget that the Italians, ethnically one of the oldest of civilizations, are politically one of the youngest of constituted European nations and the youngest of the present great powers of Europe. Italy as a reunited kingdom dates only from the time of our own Civil War in 1860, while it was not until the chance afforded by the Franco-Prussian war ten years later that the kingdom of Italy set up housekeeping again in its classic capital at Rome. During the great war it was the weakest of the allies, and, partly for that reason, was deeply disappointed by the handout of spoils at Versailles.

Everyone is familiar with the resurgence of Fascist Italy in the last ten years and can see the working out of the old bromide that "history repeats itself" in the longings for, and the beginnings of, empire which become now so patiently visioned in the national ambitions of the man of destiny who Mussolini considers himself to be. The Roman empire is rising out of the ashes like that phoenix which ancient Rome invented to symbolize its undying spirit. Hang a white toga on him and wreath his mighty brow with bays and Mussolini is a living Caesar. No other change would be necessary.

IT is not hard to glimpse that spirit in the man and in the nation he has reanimated. The virility is there and flaming. But it is difficult, even in possession of all the facts, to share in the philosophy which is directing Italy backward to the Caesars' conception of a world in which force is the prime, if not the only, element in the shaping of national destinies. If force, guile and justice, in that order, rule the world, the course of modern history certainly does not advance the position of justice. Faced with the remaining alternatives, Mussolini has at least been honest enough to acknowledge force and to repudiate guile. What does Mussolini face at home?

At well over 44,000,000, the population of Italy now exceeds that of France and closely approaches that of Great Britain among the states of Europe. Only three European countries have their people thicker on the ground; and Italy is gaining at the rate of 500,000 yearly. The fecundity of the people, fostered by the government, approaches that of the oriental nations while heavy prewar losses by emigration have stopped, thus giving Italy the full benefit of excess births over the death rate. With 350 people to the square mile, Italy is already overcrowded.

Visualize, then, the Italian peninsula as a mountainous country with large areas of marsh and much of her arable land comparatively of low productive grade. With or without unemployment, and in continuing peace even more urgently than in the kind of war now imminent, the one outstanding problem all Italy faces is how and when do we eat?

• • • •

OF FRUIT and vegetables and vineyard products Italy has enough for an exportable surplus. But staples of meat and grains are far from sufficient and the national commissary must depend on tariff-nervous imports from Hungary, Argentina, the United States, Canada and Russia. With 30 per cent of its land area unfit for any kind of tillage, Fascist Italy has done wonders in the way of swamp drainage and intensive farming but nothing envisaged in the way of crop increase can possibly begin to keep pace with the needs of faster growing millions of consumers. In an economic sense, vividly contrasting with her lavish productivity of manpower, Italy is far less developed and far less capable of development, than any other European country with corresponding pretensions.

Especially is this true in the industrial field. With little coal and less iron, Mussolini must rely on importations of these essentials. Today the largest exports are in textiles, especially cotton goods and silks, for which also the raw material must come from abroad at an alien profit. Although Italy exports motorcars she must get her heavy machinery and most of the finished metal goods she uses from Germany, England or the United States. For the tremendous efforts the Fascist government has been making these last ten years to reclaim areas for cultivation and to establish Italian manufactures on a fair competitive basis in the markets of the world Italy needs capital.

Now then, if it is clearly understood that Italy is relatively a poor country and has, since "The March on Rome," suffered from a serious deficiency of capital—if these ingredients in the domestic set-up are weighed, some conception is gained of the increasingly critical problem which Mussolini and his advisers have been trying to solve during the five years of world depression.

• • • •

ANY disinterested review of the facts must concede credit and respect for the really heroic efforts made by the Fascist government, despite the poverty of its national resources, to put the country on a sound economic basis without war or overseas aggrandizement. Those efforts have not succeeded. Peaceful methods, from the Italian viewpoint, have not worked. Denied at Versailles the equality they felt they had earned and now, as Italians believe, barred in all other directions by the powers with whom they demand an equal rating, it is not hard to rationalize in twentieth century terms of materialism the covetousness — animated in this case by national survival—with which Italy surveys the promised land of Ethiopia. Rightly or wrongly the Fascist junta believes that Ethiopia is their answer. They believe it is the only answer.

Mussolini More Fortunate Than Hitler In Dealing Mainly With Peasants.

All the rest of the huge continent of Africa, closer to their own shores and rich in the resources that Italy needs, has now been grabbed, appropriated or "mandated" by the empires of Great Britain and France, with small parcels reserved for Belgium and Portugal. The other continents are staked out or walled in under foreign flags, even beneath the polar ice, with doctrines or spheres of influence like barbed wire to protect the weaker spots. In Africa Italy's Tripolitan adventure was disproportionately costly and neither Eritrea nor Italian Somaliland come anywhere near to filling the bill. Only independent Ethiopia remains, except Liberia, the one white spot on a European-tinted map, protected only by some climate and mountains and a few signed scraps of paper already on their way to the international wastebasket.

It is Ethiopia or nothing—so believes Mussolini, and so believes his empire-inoculated Italy.

• • • •

OF course there is another side—several other aspects—of the picture. When we speak of Italy we must substitute private personal opinion for public opinion, because, in foreign affairs especially, Italy now lives and moves and has its being in and through one man. That individual, epitomizing the state he rules, has proved his ability to lead his 44,000,000 compatriots in a vibrant patriotism which subordinates self-interest to "Italia Irredenta." In Italy patriotism of this flaming type is not epidemic; it is endemic — in the people.

Since Mussolini began to steer the ship, 13 years ago, the announced objectives of Fascism in improved standards of life have not been attained. It is easy for a dictator, whose appeal is primarily to the emotions of his people, to shift the causes for partial failure to circumstances and to foreign influences outside his jurisdiction. This Il Duce has never hesitated to do.

Italy never made a success of the beginnings of democratic government. Democracy, as we understand it, seems to be more foreign to the Italian race than to the tutonic and, for this reason, a dictatorship is far more likely to endure, with success, among a predominant agrarian population, largely illiterate, than it is in the generally high literacy and technical efficiency of German society. Even under Hitler Germany is constantly seeking to rationalize its course and a thinking Germany, once sobriety is regained, is the greatest obstacle Der Fuehrer has to confront.

By contrast Italy gladly throws reason overboard to follow a modern Caesar who consciously assumes the role.

About Paris

By Andre Vulliet

The "Little Barracks."

AMONG the many or the rare joys of life (depending on whether you are an optimist or a pessimist), we think we can safely put those two unequaled pleasures, that of buying something new, whether it be a Rolls Royce or a pencil, and that of browsing about aimlessly among a display of things to buy. For those who like to combine those two charming forms of activity, there seems to be little doubt that Paris has no parallel in the world.

Not only are there beautiful stores, with as many opportunities for window shopping as in any other large city in the world, but the French have developed to its highest degree the art of sidewalk selling. When in Paris, if you think you are safe from temptation merely because you walk along briskly, wisely refraining from entering any shop or looking at any window, you are mistaken. As often as not, you will find the sidewalk has been turned into a selling floor, with peddlers and street venders vying with each other in amusing fashion to catch your attention.

This is the time of the year, for instance, when small selling booths spring up like mushrooms on both sides of the two-to-three-mile-long "boulevards," from the Madeleine up. Parisians call them the "little barracks" and like them, although they are ugly enough and somewhat spoil the boulevards. But it does not matter; it is amusing. And it is a typical Parisian tradition renewed twice a year, at Christmas and now.

• • • •

THESE little barracks are the vestige of the "Pont Neuf" fair, one of the Parisian fairs, authorized by the king in the fifteenth century. It then took place on the most modern bridge in Paris and was renowned for its offerings of candies and sweets. Now, it has become the most thrilling display of 10-to-50-cent wares of all sorts and description. In the booths, everything is on sale, from shoe laces to oil paintings, and everything is "breath-taking." "And when I say breath-taking, I'm below the truth," as the peddler would say.

Those who have not the means to rent a sidewalk space from the municipality of Paris just pick a favorable spot between two booths and display their wares on folding tables, under large parasols. For two or three weeks, this makes walking along the boulevards an amusing adventure.

• • • •

IN OTHER sections of Paris, street vending goes on all the year round, especially in the less fashionable and most popular quarters.

Stores have a way of spreading surreptitiously over the sidewalks which is really remarkable. Aside from their window displays, most of them expose a quantity of goods for sale on long tables that jut out like capes of vegetables, of shoes, of brooms and brushes, of flowers and what have you. You are always sure to find a couple of kids lost in blissful contemplation among sweets and candies, and only rarely do you not see an elder man turning over the leaves of bargain books displayed before a book shop.

Even large department stores have been won over to the habit and usually make their bargain sales out in the open air. In their case, there is even a police regulation to the effect that they are not allowed to let salesgirls operate out in the cold when the temperature gets down below the freezing point.

To a greater or lesser extent, it is like that in nearly every Paris street. To say nothing of the little push carts, so often seen along the sidewalks, with their colorful loads of cherries, peaches, bananas, flowers or vegetables. We saw an old vender yesterday proudly pushing his little vehicle on which was stuck the following sign: "All my plums are French." So many minor but constant attractions may be the reason why it seems so nice to play hookey in Paris, why it is so hard to be on time, why the pace of life in general and of passers-by in particular is so much slower than in New York.

"Did you read about Galli-Curci being run down by a scooter in that race out West the other day?"

"Yeah. It was right in the middle of her broadcast, too. Was she badly hurt?"

"No, she was able to get out and marry Winfield Sheehan, the old Fox movie man, a few days later. Graham MaNamee described the ceremony in the newsreels."

"I thought McNamee was sick."

"He had a goitre removed, that's all."

"What do you think of those American millionaires giving away big parts of their fortunes to charity and science?"

"I didn't read all the details. All I know is that Rockefeller gave Radio City to N. Y. U. or Harvard or somebody."

"Those terrible inheritance taxes proposed by Senator Borah in the Dizzy Dean tax bill are driving them to it."

"By the way, I see where Borah wanted a special election in Ohio."

"Yes, but Gov. Marion Davies wouldn't allow it."

"Have you heard how Maria Jeritza is getting along?"

"What happened to her?"

"A grandstand collapsed or something during an auto race."

"Say, those National League baseball races are getting hot, ain't they?"

"Fred Perry is giving those Cardinals some great pitching and it don't seem to have helped the Giants to get Blondy Ryan. The Yanks are slipping, too."

"Selassie Gomez?"

"That's the feller."

• • • •

"Do you think Roosevelt is losing ground with the voters?"

"No. He kept us out of Ethiopia, didn't he?"

"Yeah. And it was smart politics to restore pensions to all those men who fought in Custer's Last Fight."

We think we first saw Will Rogers in Poli's old Bijou Theater in New Haven, but it may have been in the early days of Poli's Palace across the street. And, as we recall it, Will just had his roping act, using a horse, and making no wisecracks. We caught him again in Boston one night shortly after he began joshing, and his act was a riot.

• • • •

Broadway was a great booster for Will in recent years, but it was pretty rough in its skepticism of his ability when it was first announced that Ziegfeld had signed him for the Follies. All the wise boys declared that while Will might wow 'em at the Palace, his stuff wouldn't get across against all the competition in a Follies, and in a big house like the New Amsterdam. But Will was the sensation of the Follies from the start.

Dr. Blackwell pointed out that students may now spend two years at Teachers College and then transfer to major in other subjects at the University of Maryland or any other standard college, the period at the local institution qualifying them to enter the junior class.

The following additions to the faculty was announced:

Dr. Florence Simonds, Ph. D., graduate and former instructor at the University of Maryland, to teach botany and zoology.

Miss Helen Bradley, who taught at University of Maryland last year while doing graduate work in the same field, as instructor in economics, registrar and business manager.

All the new courses offered are to correlate the curriculum with that of the first two years in standard colleges and universities.

The courses for junior and senior classes are directed toward training for the teaching profession.

Eighty new students are expected to enter the first-year class, Dr. Blackwell said. Twenty normal school graduates will return for the fourth year course, which will qualify them for the bachelor of science degree in education.

Color, Service And Good Food Cafe's Keynote

New Rendezvous Features Waitresses in Costumes of All Nations.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

MAKE A TOUR of London, Paris and Berlin. Stop over in Budapest and Moscow. Come back and explore New York. You'll find nothing like the interesting new cafe located in the heart of downtown Washington.

Not only is it frequently referred to as "the coolest spot in town," but is also called the most unusual. Only a stone's throw from F street it serves as an oasis for weary shoppers, and a rendezvous for all those who like good food plus an elegant setting, plus service. As someone aptly remarked, here there's a million-dollar atmosphere, ha'penny prices, and food that's fit for a king! Luncheons range from 40 to 60 cents, dinners from 85 cents to $1.25. Late suppers, of course, are a la carte.

The keynote to the decoration you'll find over the large open bar. Here, painted in vivid colors are the flags of all nations. On the large wall panels around the room are equally colorful maps of many countries, and scenes typifying them. For instance, on the large floor-to-ceiling map of Spain you'll see a toreador, and an angry bull, a charming senorita with a rose in her hair.

Incidentally—it might interest you to know that these scenes were painted by the same gifted group that once did the stage setings for the late Flo Ziegfeld.

Parisian wall benches covered with aquamarine leather line the wall and afford a striking contrast to the shiny black tables with their bright chrome bases. Chairs are white upholstered in the same aquamarine leather.

Just off the large room with its myriad of scenic panels is the Washington alcove. Here the walls have been transformed into a panorama of Washington and vicinity.

During the cocktail hour and from 9 until 1 in the morning a young pianist entertains you with a variety of melodies. He rolls his midget piano about the room and plays and sings request numbers for all those who ask him.

Waitresses garbed in the picturesque costumes of many nations, the bizarre decorations, the excellent cuisine, and the reasonable prices, all combine to make this a dining place par excellence.

"Swan of Plenty."

WHEN the "swan of plenty" makes his appearance in your drawing room he never fails to score! Guests welcome him and swarm around him. As a matter of fact he's the social hit of the season.

This "swan of plenty" is a heavily silver plated server in the shape of a graceful swan. He's feathered with colored cocktail picks which fit into the numerous little holes in his sides. On these picks you place bits of cheese, olives, or tidbits of any kind, and let the swan present them to your guests.

Along with Mr. Swan comes a tray ten and a half inches in diameter which is just right for his "pond." Probably you'll want to buy tray and swan together—they're only $3. The swan alone is $1.

Try These Bath Salts.

The Romans were quite right about one thing, and that's the bath. They regarded it as a foremost pleasure, to be enjoyed to the fullest. Just think how many of us slight the bath by reducing it to a ten-minute occasion minus any pomp and ceremony!

One beauty house insists that the woman who spends 20 minutes in the tub each day, and relaxes thoroughly while she's there, will feel better and look younger.

Her bath, though, should be a thing of luxury, they insist. And here's what they suggest: The water luke warm. To this add a tablespoon or so of a certain fine bath crystals. These will perfume the water, and soften it at the same time.

You may buy these in 60-cent containers in lavender, rose, violet and bouquet fragrance.

Victory for Republicans Forecast by Mrs. Hoyal

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Wilma D. Hoyal, recently arrived in Washington to take up her duties as director of the women's division of the National Republican Committee, feels that the interest and influence of women in politics is greater now than ever before.

Women Will Vote Against New Deal Because of Its Instability, Extravagance, She Adds; Husband Cheerfully Gives "Wife to Country."

By Dudley Harmon.

"WOMEN WILL PLAY a greater part in the coming national election than they have ever played in any previous one. In my opinion, women are extremely patriotic at heart, and their patriotism has never been so thoroughly aroused as at the present moment, when the strength and durability of our American institutions is being put to the test as never before."

So stated Mrs. Wilma D. Hoyal, who came out of the West to Washington this week to take up her new duties as director of the women's division of the Republican National Committee. Her job is to persuade the women of the country to vote Republican in the presidential election of 1936. Already she is involved in a maze of speaking engagements and radio broadcasts which will take her over the entire country this fall and winter, and already she is engaged in gathering material for the use of Republican women's clubs from Maine to California.

Sees Increasing Interest.

Mrs. Hoyal feels that the interest of women in politics is greater now than it has even been. She believes that they can play an important role in politics if they will, and that to a great extent their efforts will determine the results of the coming election.

"To my way of thinking," she said, "the increased interest of women in politics can be explained by the fact that the issue at stake is not merely a partisan one, but one involving patriotism as well. Under the present Administration, women see American institutions, which were responsible for the growth and one-time tremendous prosperity of our country, in danger of extinction."

The coming election, Mrs. Hoyal feels, will result in a sweeping victory for the Republicans.

New Deal Branded Unstable.

"Women, even more than men," she said, "are turning against the New Deal. They want stability in their Government as in everything else. The vast spending program of the present Administration, and the lack of continuity in its policies, has undermined their confidence.

"Then, too, the owners of small businesses are rising up in arms against governmental interference with their business. The economic measures of the New Deal have hurt them seriously, and they are finding it extremely difficult to survive."

Mrs. Hoyal, who comes from Douglas, Ariz., has been interested in politics almost ever since she first knew the meaning of the word. Her father and grandfather were leaders in Kansas politics, and at an age when other little girls were playing with their dolls, Mrs. Hoyal accompanied the two men on their political campaigns. She traveled all over the State with them, listening to their speeches and acquiring her first lessons in political strategy.

Has Held Several Offices.

A large part of her life has been devoted to public office of one kind or another. After graduation from the State college in Kansas, she spent several years in organization work and public speaking. She has been State president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Republican elector and precinct, county and State committeewoman for the Republican Party.

Mrs. Hoyal has a husband, no child. Her husband is an ardent Republican, as evinced by the following telegram which she found from him upon her arrival in Washington: "My only regret is that I have but one wife to give to my country."

Leather Goods Require Special Care in Summer

Leather articles require especial care in summer. Keep them in a dry, well-lighted, well-ventilated place or they may mildew. This can happen to your purse, your leather shoes, leather books, a suit case or a leather chair, particularly if stored in the cellar. If you find mildew has started to grow wash it off immediately with soap and warm water or with a moist cloth. Dry the leather well afterward.

Adolescent Age Finds Children Playing Hermit

By Alice Clarissa Richmond,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

There are a few years in most children's lives which might be called the hermit years. Generally they are the years of adolescence. The most sociable child, who has been a nuisance with his ubiquitousness, suddenly prefers solitude.

He likes long, lonely walks, and when at home prefers to retire to his room and shut the door. What he wants to do which requires such utter seclusion, is often a mystery to everyone.

It is useless to try to draw him into the family circle at this time. The only place where he feels at ease is with youngsters of his own age, at school or on the playground. He is not abnormal, nor will he become a confirmed recluse. He is best left alone until the period is over.

He is in a state of profound mental confusion and needs time to adjust himself to the new conditions of life which he realizes, not always consciously, that he must face. The caterpillar goes into a cocoon before he becomes a butterfly; the snake hides away to slough off his skin. The child who is turning into an adult feels the same need for retirement.

Children annoy him. He was too recently one himself, and is more than likely to be treated like one still. Adults do not yet accept him, and he feels at a disadvantage in their presence. He begins to be conconscious of his personal appearance, but does not yet know what to do about it.

When in company he slinks about, if possible unobserved, and is restive. He is far happier alone while he builds up his self-confidence and prepares to face the world in his new impersonation.

Pleated Shirtwaist Dress Is Stylish the Year 'Round

Pattern No. 970.

SUMMER, winter, spring and fall—the shirtwaist dress goes on and on. True, it modifies and re-styles its details—for instance, the new placing of the pleats, the bow collar, and the four pockets in this design. But its wearability, its usefulness for almost any hour, remain unchanged.

Why not start the new season with this 1935 shirtwaist dress? Made in a heavy crepe or sheer wool, in one of the new fall shades, and trimmed with wooden or nut buttons, it is a striking dress. The pattern is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 16 or 34 requires 2½ yards of 54-inch fabric. A less tailored version is also included in the pattern.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I read your columns every day and do get so much from them. I want your advice in regard to my daughter's going to Strayer College. She finished high school in June; is 17 years old.

She enoys the company of girls and boys, but isn't crazy about boys—just likes to have fun. Her father and I have very little money to go on, as times have been so hard on the farm.

• • • •

My sister has offered to let her stay in her home, free of charge; and the only big expense would be the $25-a-month tuition fee at business school. I have saved money for this purpose since she was a little girl. What I wanted her father to pay for is her bus fare and school books.

• • • •

I feel if she could get business training there would be a chance that she could help her next younger sister after she had found a job. I have had no experience with the world, and would so love for my children to have their opportunity. Their father thinks he has done enough in sending them to high school. He says he only went as far as the sixth grade and he gets along, and that they can, too.

Yours truly, MRS. F. F. B.

A Laudable Ambition.

DEAR MRS. F. F. B.—I have talked with Mr. E. G. Purvis, dean of the school you have in mind, regarding the advisability of your borrowing money to give your daughter business training. He tells me school books would cost approximately $3 a month and carfare something less than $1 a week, bringing monthly expenses (with tuition at $25 a month) to the neighborhood of $32.

Dean Purvis says a girl of your daughter's age, graduated from a country high school and coming from a farm home background, ordinarily requires 10 to 12 months' class work if she is to become a thoroughly qualified stenographer or secretary.

• • • •

Supposing your daughter is a student of average ability, this means you will need to expend $250 to $300 for tuition expenses alone; and $70 to $85 additional for books and carfare. With no more knowledge of your financial means and of your daughter's scholastic abilities than is afforded by your letter, Dean Purvis was not prepared at the moment either to encourage or discourage you in borrownig what money you might need to see your daughter through.

• • • •

However, he said if you will get in touch with him, he will be glad to go into the situation in detail, prepare estimates and give full information and advice.

• • • •

Now, for my own opinion: If your daughter is genuinely ambitious to make the most of further educational opportunity, I think you could make no better investment of borrowed money than to send her to business school. If she is strong and healthy, and possesses character, dependability and initiative, there's no reason why she shouldn't find part-time work to do, of evenings and week-ends, to help pay incidental expenses of carfare and books (unless, of course, your sister expects her to work in her home as payment for room and board).

• • • •

There's a possibility she can get enough benefit from six or eight months of study (by diligently applying herself) to be able to hold a job at the end of that time and thereby save the difference you might otherwise have to borrow. It may encourage you to know that I myself can muster actual testimonials as to my own proficiency as typist, stenographer and secretary. And all the training I ever had in that field was acquired in a rather hit-or-miss course in a small city high school, along with numerous other required and elective subjects, a good many years ago.

• • • •

I am not at all in sympathy with your husband's theory that because he "gets along" on his rudimentary education, his children can do so, too. If he had proper pride as a parent, he would wish and strive to open up for them an ampler field of opportunity than he has ever enjoyed.

Room of Child Also Should Be His Workshop

Blocks, Crayons, Cloth and Other Materials Assist Creative Impulse.

The following article is the second of a series on home activities for children. These appear Tuesdays and Saturdays on the woman's page. Mrs. Bartlett, the author, is active in progressive education circles.

By Lenore K. Bartlett.

IS YOUR CHILD'S room only a place in which to sleep, or is it a workshop as well? Is it merely attractively decorated or is it conducive to constructive use of leisure time in work and pleasure? Many mothers make the excuse that there is no room for work materials. It is true that we do not have space such as our grandmothers had, but changes in home activities since that day make it necessary to provide a new type of equipment for our children.

MRS. BARTLETT

The daily tasks of weaving, spinning, baking, sewing are no longer done in the home. Yet our children, if they are to understand these fundamental necessities in our daily lives, should be familiarized with these processes in order not only to understand better the present, but to afford an opportunity of using their hands and minds constructively. The lack of such equipment in the home of today is a real justification for at least partially sacrificing some of the purely decorative frills for usable materials through which the child can express his creative instinct.

Child Creates Setting.

I know of one child who made a complete stage and marionettes in a small apartment. A corner of the bedroom was used for materials and equipment and on many occasions the entire apartment was in disarray. But that was easily remedied and the inconvenience was more than justified. The child had created a setting through which she could express her own ideas of life situations and with it went the feeling of joy in the creating and the happy constructive use of leisure. Week-ends were all too short for her. And in addition to the actual work at home, this meant research at the library, purchase of materials and a plan of work which was typical of the approach necessary to larger tasks she will confront in later life.

Children need materials with which to experiment. They want to be able to express in some concrete form, their own conception of the great outside world which is gradually opening up to them. Their results may not meet adult standards but to them they are real. Be sure not to judge the results of your child's efforts by what you may think a house or a cow or an automobile should look like. It is from just such crude concepts that originality and individuality of expression emanate.

Here are some materials that can be used indoors by children between the ages of 5 and 12 with varying degrees of skill: Wooden blocks of various shapes and sizes, plain brown wrapping paper or unprinted newspaper, show card colors and crayons, scrap books, picture albums, plants and acquariums, a set of tools, wood for carving, linoleum and tools for block printing, leather for tooling, cheese cloth, colored pieces and old clothes for costumes, clay for modeling.

For those fortunates who have yard space or a basement there are many fascinating things to do! Hutches to make for rabbits, bird houses to build, wigwams from burlap, old crates and large packing boxes for constructing houses, trains or boats in which the child can dramatize life situations and fashion a bird bath out of plaster or build a house for the dog. But don't do as an acquaintance of mine did and have the "man" do it for the children.

Provide your child first, materials with which to experiment, then, if he needs it, suggest uses for the materials until his interest is aroused; but let the child do the work and it will be more satisfying to him, even though it does not measure up to adult standards.

Career Held No Bar to Proper Management of Home

Leave Simple Chores to Servants, Successful Women Advise.

The following article is the last in a series on how career women manage their homes and their jobs.

By Emma Perley Lincoln.

THE career woman takes her home life in her stride. You are sure of that when you have talked to Stella Aiken and Phoebe Omlie, two of the outstanding younger women in the affairs of the day.

Both like beautiful surroundings and gracious living, and both know how to achieve them with no apparent effort or trouble.

According to their own statements, neither one is the least domestic in the sense which means spending important time dallying about a house. Both think that actual housework should be done by persons who cannot do anything else, or who have an inant love for it.

Miss Aiken, though considered one of the most brilliant lawyers in the United States Department of Justice, admits that she can't boil water, and if she had to cook a meal or starve, she'd probably starve. This upsets all the notions about successful women being able to turn a hand to anything with equal skill.

"The reason I do not know how to do anything about a house," Miss Aiken said, "is because until coming to Washington I have always lived at home, where the machinery of living has been running intact for several generations. I could learn if I wanted to."

Counts Her Linen.

Certain duties about her apartment Miss Aiken does with her own hands. She counts the linen to and from the laundry. She discards the withered flowers, and stops at the market for fresh ones. When she is having friends in for cocktails, she mentally makes all arrangements in the taxi on her way to the office, and once planned in thought, the rest is easy.

She has a clever arrangement with her maid whom she does not see for days on end. When she departs in the morning she leaves any additional orders pinned on a lamp shade near the entrance door and the maid in turn pins notes in the same place, saying what is needed in the way of supplies for housekeeping.

"We do not eat our meals in my apartment, which is nonhousekeeping," Miss Aiken said, "but my sister who lives with me and Phoebe Omlie and I all enjoy taking our meals where evening finds us. If the night is rainy, Mrs. Omlie will phone me, and we will suddenly decide to dine in the apartment, and each will stop at the market on the way home and pick up whatever food we want to."

Miss Aiken and Mrs. Omlie do not exactly live together, as each has her own establishment, Miss Aiken an apartment in town, and Mrs. Omlie a house on the South River, near Annapolis. They manage to be together, however, at one place or the other, most of the time. Miss Aiken likes aviation and Mrs. Omlie likes law, so they form a congenial partnership.

"I have no telephone in my house," Mrs. Omlie said, "and it's not a mere whim when I say that it gives me the quiet I need. My job means constant and consistent study, and I do not know how I could accomplish it otherwise."

Mrs. Omlie is special assistant to the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics.

Cook Runs House.

Mrs. Omlie brought her cook with her from Memphis and has her housekeeping so planned that no matter when she drops in at South River, or how many people she brings with her, a good meal is always assured. This means forethought to keep the larder sufficiently well supplied with staples. Other than bringing down food, Mrs. Omlie pays virtually no attention to her house.

Her home in Memphis is managed with the same casual success. As her husband, Capt. Omlie, cannot arrange his own job to spend much time in Washington, the home there must more less run itself, but properly established and put in running order, this is an achievement always possible, according to Mrs. Omlie.

Miss Vera M. Lundquist, assistant promotion manager for Nation's Business, is the one professional woman we have encountered who does all her own housework. She says that working with her brain all day, give a certain zest to working with her hands, nights and mornings.

She gets her own breakfast, eats a heavy dinner in the middle of the day, downtown, and a light supper at home at night. She keeps her own clothes in order, pressing and mending, and does her own cleaning.

"The regulation servant's idea of cleanliness doesn't suit me at all," said Miss Lundquist, "so I attend to everything in my small apartment myself, with the exception of twice a year, when I have a reliable woman come in and give everything a thorough going-over."

Underwood & Underwood.

Physician Should Aim to Cure Mind's Ills With Those of Body

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

PLATO says, "As you ought not to attempt to cure the eyes without the head, or the head without the body, so neither ought you to attempt to cure the body without the mind."

In our effort to identify organic disease—disease that is characterized by cell change in some of the structures of the body—we often overlook the temperament, the disposition, the fears and perplexities of patients. It is well known that any or all of these factors may be translated into symptoms that are mistaken frequently for organic disease.

The average person has learned to adapt himself to difficult situations through the use of reason and common sense. There may come a time, however, when the burden of necessary adjustments becomes heavier than the individual can bear, with the result that he develops a psychoneurosis.

For the treatment of this condition nothing but a careful analysis of the basic causative factors will show the way out. The physician must be a good listener and the patient must be persuaded to tell his life history from childhood onward, all about his physical ailments, his joys, hopes, and fears. He must be prevailed upon to describe his emotional experiences, and it may require several interviews before all phases of his mental and emotional life have been uncovered.

A definite plan of living must then be worked out for the sufferer with a proper balance of work, recreation, exercise, and rest. Regularity is of the utmost importance. The physician must then plan re-education based upon his power to influence the patient's thinking.

Today Will See Fasting to Prevent War.

Seventh-Day Adventists in Washington today will join fellow worshipers throughout the world in a special observance dedicated to peace.

According to the executive committee of the church, this Sabbath has been set aside as "a day of fasting and prayer in behalf of world peace, that God may hold the winds of strife, and that more settled conditions may obtain for the finishing of the work of God in the earth."

Calls for participation in this fasting and prayer have been sent to all churches of the denomination in North and South America, in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and the islands of the sea. The order points out that "a great crisis hour in this earth's history has been reached." Jones in Line For Maryland Police Helm

Employment Official Is Slated to Succeed Maj. Wright.

War Record, Employment Bureau Work Cited as Factors.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 23.—Authoritative sources revealed tonight that Col. Harry C. Jones, Maryland State employment commissioner and colonel in the Army Reserve, will be named superintendent of Maryland State Police by Gov. Nice as the successor to Maj. J. Purdon Wright.

It also was revealed that none of the other Army officers recently mentioned as possibilities for the post has been consulted by the Governor.

Col. Jones' present term expires October 1, the date on which Wright relinquishes his post.

It was understood when Maj. Wright took the reins of reorganizing the State police under the new administration, he was to remain until reorganization had taken place and that he would step out October 1.

Col. Jones was named to the employment commissioner's office to complete the term of Oliver Short, who resigned soon after Gov. Nice took office.

Authoritative circles say the Governor is pleased with the record of Col. Jones. It has been stated he has handled his present position very satisfactorily and his military service fills the Governor's initial requirement.

In 1917 Col. Jones was a colonel in the Fourth Maryland Infantry. He served with the Twenty-ninth Division in France for a year and was stationed for part of that time at Meuse-Argonne.

Beer-Drinking Bout Off, Due to Ethics

Baltimore, Aug. 23 (AP).—Baltimore's battle over the beer-guzzling championship took a new and world-wide turn today.

Yesterday, members of the Greater Baltimore Democratic Club charged that commercialism had entered the picture and refused to allow their champion, one Steve Smeton, to meet Emil "Feets" Cella, titleholder of the Eastern Democratic Club.

The Eastern Democrats, Smeton's handlers contended, simply wanted to draw a crowd to their picnic.

Cella's handlers came back again today, challenging the world at large at guzzling.

Cella's record is 64 ounces of beer in 27.6 seconds—and he went to the hospital the day after making it. Smeton's time is 25.6 seconds for 64 ounces.

$25,000 Asked From 18 After Recount Action

Phoebus Man Contends Petition Falsely Held Him Guilty of Crime.

By the Associated Press.

Hampton, Va., Aug. 23.—A suit for $25,000 against 18 signers of a petition asking a recount of returns in the Holt-Wilson primary contest for nomination as county treasurer has been filed by Arthur W. Brown, Phoebus, former soldier.

He contends the petition's allegation he had been convicted of crime was false. Brown denied he ever had been convicted of any offense, and asserts he never was in court, even as a witness.

The petition, signed by 18 friends of Clerk of the Court Harry H. Holt—whom R. E. Wilson, of Phoebus, defeated by a scant majority for the Democratic nomination—alleges that voters, particularly in Phoebus, who were allowed to cast ballots were disqualified by reason of the commission of a crime.

Brown's notice of motion, filed with Sheriff C. C. Curtis, alleges the petitioners' statements were "wanton, oppressive and malicious, and engendered by malice, ill-will and revenge because of the defeat of the candidate supported by you, and further by heavy financial losses sustained by you, the said George B. Colonna, C. W. Quinn and J. B. F. Vaughan in betting on the results of the primary election."

Physicians Plan Pilgrimage To Tomb of First 'M.D.' in U.S.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 23.—Officials of the Harford County Medical Association today were completing plans for the proposed pilgrimage of the Maryland Medical and Chirurgical Society into Harford County October 10 to pay homage to Dr. John Archer, reputed the first physician to secure a medical diploma in America.

The trip here will be known officially as the Dr. John Archer pilgrimage, Dr. Charles Richardson, of Bel Air, president of the Harford County Association, said.

Officials of State and county groups conferred here this week on arrangements for the tour, which will include a visit to the old Archer home, Medical Hall, near here, and the placing of a wreath on the noted physician's tomb.

Dr. Archer was born near Churchville in Harford County—then a part of Baltimore County—May 5, 1741, and was graduated from Princeton in 1760 with an A. B. degree. He received his M. A. degree from the same institution in 1763.

He attended lectures at the College of Philadelphia, forerunner of the present University of Pennsylvania, and on June 21, 1768, took the degree of M. B., or Bachelor of Medicine.

His class, historians here say, was the first graduating medical class in America and an exciting contest ensued among its members as to the recipient of the first diploma.

The matter was compromised by conferring the degrees alphabetically with Dr. Archer's name heading the list.

In 1800, he was elected to Congress by the Jeffersonian Party and was reelected in 1802. His death occurred suddenly September 28, 1810, and he was buried near Churchville.

3,000 Troops Pass Muster Before Peery

Governor Reviews 91st of National Guard at Virginia Beach.

Biggest Military Display Held at Shore Since the World War.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 23.—Nearly 3,000 troops of the Ninety-first Brigade, Virginia National Guard, passed in review before Gov. George C. Peery this afternoon at the Virginia Beach State military reservation.

It was the biggest review held there since the World War, consisting of the full strength of the First and 116th Infantry Regiment and four companies of special troops assigned to train at the reservation during the two-week encampment which began last Saturday.

The troops were put into motion by Col. J. Fulmer Bright, commander of the First Infantry, who afterward retired to his place in the brigade staff to let Gov. Peery and Brig. Gen. S. G. Waller, adjutant general, take the review.

Sixteen trucks of the First Infantry Service Company passed in review four abreast. The regiment was motorized last spring and this was the first time the trucks had been reviewed.

More than half an hour was required for the brigade to pass in review. It was led by the Richmond Blues of the First Infantry. Bands of both regiments played during the review and the special troops, headquarters and hospital companies of the 110th and the signal and tank companies of the Twenty-ninth Division brought up the rear.

Immediately after the review Gov. Peery and members of the brigade staff held a reception on the parade grounds. After the reception on the field, the Governor and his party returned to brigade headquarters, where the officers of the regiment were presented.

Gov. Peery was welcomed at the reservation by a salute of 19 guns and later was guest of honor at a luncheon in the mess hall of the Ninety-first Brigade headquarters.

The Governor left the camp late in the afternoon for a fishing trip in Chesapeake Bay. He would not say where he was going, but he did say he had to be back in Richmond early tomorrow morning.

Witness Scales Wall And Flees From Jail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 23.—Scaling a wall at the Franklin County Jail, Raymond Brown, 31, Negro, held as a material witness in a chicken-stealing case, escaped this afternoon.

The escape was made while Brown and nine other Negro prisoners were in the yard cleaning cots. Although Brown had been missing only a few minutes before the alarm was given by a "trusty," a search by county authorities and State police failed to locate him. Authorities said Brown had assistance in reaching the top of the wall, from which there is an easy drop to an adjacent blacksmith shop.

Virginia Drys to Fight Hotels' Sale of Drinks

Richmond, Va., Aug. 23 (AP).—A spokesman of "dry" forces in Virginia served notice today that they would fight the reported plan of hotel interests to seek an amendment to the ABC law to permit sale of liquor by the drink in hotels.

"Naturally, the Antisaloon League is interested in any measure calculated to reduce the consumption of alcoholic beverages," Dr. E. J. Richardson, its State superintendent, said, "and is opposed to that which may tend to increase such copsumption."

School Strike Looms Over Janitor's Ousting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 23. The Harrison County School Board is faced with the threat of a school children's strike Monday, September 9, when the schools reopen in the county.

Parents in Broadway and Industrial are reported to have banded together in an argeement to keep their children out of school at the Broadway Junior High School until William Lewis, veteran janitor at the school, has been restored to his position. The board employed C. Ray Leonard.

After more than 100 patrons of the school had called on the school board to insist on the return of Lewis to the place, the board decided to employ Lewis as a substitute assistant janitor to work wherever needed, but the school patrons are said not to be satisfied with that arrangement.

Operating Cost Of State Boat Low, Is Report

Maryland Flagship Run on Insurance Fund of Predecessor.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 23.—The cost of upkeep and maintenance for the Dupont, flagship of the conservation commission's fleet, has been less than the difference between her purchase price and the amount of insurance paid on her predecessor, it was revealed today.

The Dupont, a 180-foot steam yacht, has been in the public eye recently as a result of complaints about the boat's cruises with State officials aboard.

The Dupont was bought to replace the Tech, previous flagship. The original cost of the Tech was $1, as she was given to the State, and the dollar was paid to make the title transfer legal.

The Tech burned several years ago and $50,000 insurance was collected. In searching for a boat to replace the Tech, officials of the conservation department found the Dupont. Her original cost was about $300,000, but she could be bought in 1932 for $29,793.50. Because of this low cost, she was bought, although she was bigger than was needed for conservation work, it was said.

Purchase of the Dupont left a balance of the insurance fund of $20,306.50. Upkeep, maintenance and repair costs totaled $17,000 between August, 1932, when the boat was acquired, and September, 1934, when she was laid up for the winter.

In addition, in the spring of this year the board of public works allotted $3,000 for work on the boat. Of this amount, $1,500 was spent for marine railway bills; $800 for fuel, and $700 for repairs and replacement of equipment.

Use of the Dupont for other than conservation work was first criticized by Senator Harry T. Phoebus (Republican), Somerset, who said that when the Dupont with her uniformed crew cruised through a fleet of fishermen trying to make 50 cents a day it was like a red flag to a bull.

He sent word that he would be on hand regardless of adjournment and would be accompanied by Senator John G. Townsend, of Delaware, one of the largest commercial apple producers in the East.

Several others of the Senator's congressional colleagues are expected to attend the picnic and mingle with the hundreds of fruit growers from Virginia and neighboring sections of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Class A Rating Denied To Anne Arundel Jail

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 23.—Largely because some of the cells were found to be dark and the bedding and the interior of them showed evidence of neglect, the Anne Arundel County Jail at Annapolis failed to obtain a class A rating in the annual report of the State board of welfare, of which Charles J. Butler is director.

The second-class rating was based upon general construction and cleanliness, fire protection, good food and some attention to rehabilitation, the report states. The jail warden does not appear to have sufficient help to properly cover his many duties, the report points out.

Somerset, Pa., Aug. 23.—Potatoes will not be offered this fall and winter on the market for prices ranging from 30 to 50 cents a bushel if the Somerset County crop can be taken as a criterion.

Good grade potatoes this fall and winter will be a premium in the opinion of leading growers in Somerset County. The weather during the growing season was exceedingly wet and cool nights have added to the damage by blight.

Scenes From Old Testament Unfolded in Bible Pageant

Several Thousand See the Final Presentation at Massanetta.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 23.—Eight dramatic scenes from the Old Testament, from the time of Noah to the days of Moses' pronouncement of the Ten Commandments, were unfolded tonight in the second and final presentation of the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference biblical pageant.

Several thousand persons saw the colorful and impressive production of T. Beverly Campbell, played by 200 characters on the stage of a natural amphitheater. Costumes, sound and lighting effects and the setting added to the effectiveness of the production.

The author and the conference management hope to make the pageant an annual feature.

The Bible conference, well attended throughout, will end Sunday with addresses by Dr. J. Layton Mauze, Kansas City; Dr. Albert W. Beaven, Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. William Evans, of Los Angeles, and Dr. John McDowell, New York City.

Dr. Beaven spoke today on "The Christian Family the Center of a Christian Civilization." He asserted not enough emphasis is placed on "the greatest institution—home," where, he said, the raw materials of the world's institutions are made. The home, Dr. Beaven declared, has a greater opportunity than the church in molding character because it has more time for the work.

Forces of 29th Forsake Camp To Battle 'Foe'

Aviation Unit Will Join Maryland Guardsmen in Maneuver.

By Phil Austensen,

A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Reckford, Mount Gretna, Pa., Aug. 23.—The Twenty-ninth Division marched out of camp today for an overnight hike which will culminate in a battle maneuver tomorrow morning.

Stepping like veterans, the citizen soldiers hiked to their night's bivouac about four miles away. Pup tents were pitched and sentries established. The march showed the benefit of the several days of minor unit maneuvers the men have undergone this week.

All units of the division in camp here joined the hike and bivouac except the aviation division, which remained at its Middletown base but will perform night reconnaissance and aid in battle operations.

Commanded by Col. D. John Mackey, of Frederick, the first infantry led the marching units from camp. The fifth, of Baltimore, followed. Artillery units and the 104th Medical Regiment completed the units engaged. The division staff, with the commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckford, left camp at 4 o'clock to join the troops. Gen. Reckford's traveling palace accompanied the march as did that of Brig. Gen. Washington Bowie.

Trailers Tested.

The traveling trailers are being tested by National Guard officers before being issued to the regular Army. They have many comforts, and when extended provide a room about 8 by 10 feet.

Another trailer innovation was exhibited to officers today by the 104th Observation Squadron, photo section. The trailer, the only one of its kind, is a traveling dark room in which photos taken on the field and in the air can be developed and printed within a few moments on the field of battle.

Members of the 110th Field Artillery were summoned from their beds early today by fire call. Dashing from their tents they found the fire a minor one.

High winds lashed the camp all night and tent stays were hard put to withstand the blow. Prior nights in camp have been cool, but have not approached the cold of last night and this morning.

Silvester Promoted.

Lieut. Col. Lindsay McD. Silvester, Regular Army instructor for the division, learned of his promotion to that rank yesterday. After supper, Mrs. Reckord, wife of the commanding general, and Mrs. Carey Jarmin, wife of Lieut. Col. Jarmin, of the division staff, pinned on his silver leaves.

The division will return to camp before noon tomorrow and then will be excused from further activities until Monday, except for ceremonials planned for Sunday visitors.

Farm Group Asks Inquiry On Pearson

Montgomery Bureau to Seek Explanation of U. of Md. Change.

Resolution Will Go Before State Convention Next Month.

By the Associated Press.

Rockville, Aug. 23.—A resolution requesting the Maryland Farm Bureau to "inquire into the reasons" behind the dismissal of Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, as president of the University of Maryland, was being whipped into shape today by J. W. Jones, president of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau.

Jones, at his office here, said the resolution was passed by the local's board of directors and given to him to prepare for submission to the State organization. It will be presented in time for the September meeting.

"Dr. Pearson is a very fine agricultural man so far as we farmers are concerned," Jones said. "And our board of directors feels that that some reason should have been given for his summary dismissal.

"We feel that he laid a good foundation for State agricultural pursuits while he held office. He was instrumental in securing the passage of many bills in Congress which were of material aid to farmers in this and other States.

"He was dismissed, so far as we can see, with no reason at all given for the dismissal. Our idea is to determine how the rest of the farmers in the State feel about it. And the best means of doing so is to request the State Farm Bureau to conduct the investigation."

"In any event," Jones added, "we want to be certain that the next president of the university will be a good agricultural man."

The Montgomery Farm Bureau, he said, naturally had no means of knowing Dr. Pearson's capacity as a university administrator, but the board of directors felt the secrecy which surrounded the executive's dismissal should be cleared up for the "good of the farmers."

The Montgomery County local is the oldest farm bureau in the State. It was organized in 1919, some months prior to the formation of the National Farm Bureau.

In Baltimore, C. E. Wise, secretary-treasurer of the State Farm Bureau, asserted the resolution would be considered by the September meeting of the board of directors.

Winchester Firemen Fail to Agree on Chief

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 23.—The executive committees of the four companies of the Winchester Volunteer Fire Department announced yesterday they were unable to agree on a unanimous choice for fire chief to succeed the late C. Lee Barr. As a result, it is probable members of common council will be compelled to make a choice between two candidates.

Fred Forney, for 25 years a member of Friendship Company, has been indorsed for the position as has R. B. Brown, captain of Sarah Zane, who has received the approval of Charlie Rouss, South End and Sarah Zane companies.

Auto Accidents Cost City.

Baltimore, Aug. 23 (AP).—The banging by Baltimore motorists into lamp posts, safety beacons and telephone poles has cost the city and utility companies here more than $17,000 since the first of this year. Approximately 815 poles and beacons have fallen victim to motorists during that period.

Felicia—Why have an automobile if it worries you to death every time you take it on a long trip, especially when you can get a dependable car like the '35 Chevrolet advertised on the page opposite the comics today for only $549.

Good Morning

Many people accustomed to leaving Washington for all or part of the summer, and perhaps annoyed because this year they can not do so due to the protracted session of Congress, would do well to accept the fact that Washington is a great summer city. Imagine yourself an Iowan or Texan tourist and really look around.

"Annapolis Farewell," Proves Film With Fine Appeal to Emotions and the Navy

Sir Guy Puts Forth Best in Service Story

Other Characters in Tale of the Navy Are Merely Running Dead Last.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL." Paramount picturization of a story by Stephen Morehouse Avery, adapted to the screen by Grover Jones, William Slavens McNutt, and Frank Craven, featuring Sir Guy Standing, Richard Cromwell, Tom Brown, Rosalind Keith, Benny Baker, Louise Beavers, Minor Watson, and Dorothy Vaughn. Directed by Alexander Hall. Previewed Thursday night.

There is not, I should say, anything epochal about "Annapolis Farewell." There is, on the contrary, a great deal that delves deeply into the psychology of those who dedicate their lives to the service of the Nation in the aquatic branches of its defense.

As a tribute to the fine tradition, the indomitable spirit and the unquenchable fidelity of the naval branch of the country's first line of protection to the legend that has built itself up about the supremacy of the Navy there can be no underwriting of the cinematic value of this latest addition to the long list of complimentary shadow dramas that have been built upon it.

While there is a great deal that is general in the approach which this picture makes to the subject of pride in uniform and stripes, there is even more that centers in the personification of greatness that evolves from a purely personal appraisal of the dignity and social worth of a post of importance among the commissioned of Uncle Sam.

Standing Stands Out.

Sir Guy Standing, in the role of the officer who served with Dewey at Manila, is the whole substance and fiber of a picture which strives to catch the entire spirit of the United States Naval Academy, but only manages to catch the spirit of a single aged officer who has felt the thrills of conquest and thinks he sees the standards of the service being lowered by the oncoming generation.

The picture is not an epic of the service. It is the saga of an individual. The old Commodore is the be-all and end-all of the film's dramatic appeal. He is a grand character, grandly done by Sir Guy Standing. None better could have been hit upon for the role of the faithful officer of the braid and trappings whose life ends with that of the valiant craft on which he served back in '98 than this estimable ex-actor whose fame strangely enough is based largely upon his prowess as a naval man in the Great War.

Although the picture is primarily a tribute to the viewpoint of service in "the first line of defense" that centers in the constricted vision the veteran who has been "through the wars" there are other roles that take on some semblance of dramatic importance in the final working out of events.

These include the youthful parts assumed by Tom Brown, Richard Cromwell, Rosalind Keith and Benny Baker, all of which were played, perhaps, a little beyond their merits.

At last night's premiere, which it may be remarked was at the Warner Bros. Metropolitan Theater, preceding today's usual opening at the Earle, many personages of distinction were assembled. The official preview of the film was an event of rather more than customary importance.

I had the privilege of sitting next the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Henry Roosevelt, and after the showing of the picture was over was able to sound him out a bit as to the worth of the celluloid. Informally, and off the record, he though it was pretty good.

That is about what I thought. So that is what I put on the air when Paramount suggested that its newsreel would be greatly enhanced by a few words from some of us.

So that is how that "clip" in the trailer happened.

Beginning today, "Annapolis Farewell" will be the regular feature attraction of the week at the Earle.

It is well worth your scrutiny.

Whatever the supplementaries may be, "Annapolis Farewell," all by itself, will be better.

Postlude

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Sixteenth summer entertainment at the Sylvan Theater. Operatic concert by the United States Marine Band (Capt. Taylor Branson, leader), assisted by Anne Yago McGuffey, contralto; Justin Lawrie, tenor, and Edwin Steffe, barytone. Program: Instrumental selections from "Aida," "Le Cid," "Andrea Chenier" and "Tannhaeuser;" contralto soli from "Le Prophete" and "Carmen;" tenor soli from "L'Elisir d'Amore" and "Pagliacci;" barytone solo from "Herodiade;" tenor and barytone duet from "La Forza del Destino;" contralto and tenor duet from "Il Travatore."

Grass damp from a late afternoon shower and chairs bedewed with moisture did not deter a sizable audience from gathering last night in the Monument grounds to applaud a program designed for popular enjoyment. Nothing was played or sung that was not thoroughly familiar to the average amateur of opera, with the possible exception of the "grand scene" from Massenet's lyric drama about the Spanish paladin, and familiarity, in the case of music, does not usually breed contempt.

Included in the list of offerings were the inevitable march of triumph from "Aida," the Donizettian aria, "Una furtiva lagrima;" Meyerbeer's "Ah, mon fils;" the invocatory, "Vision fugitive," which Massenet put in the mouth of Herod, the tetrarch; Carmen's provocative "Habanera;" the dolorous duet, "Solenne in quest'ora," from "La Forza del Destino;" a mosaic of the most effective melodies from Giordano's opera of the French Revolution; the throbbing "Vesti la giubba," from Leoncavallo's veristic tragedy; the prison duet, "Ai nostri monti," from "Il Trovatore," and the overture to "Tannhaeuser."

The singers acquitted themselves creditably on the open-air stage, which is always a trial for tone production. Moreover, they had to cope with a powerful amplifier, which was pitiless in its magnification of each and every quaver. Judging from the quantity of applause, the hits of the evening were the solos intoned by Messrs. Lawrie and Steffe, and their sonorous duet.

13 CCC Workers Fired After Strike

Their Agitation Resulted in 100 Walking Out.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 22.—Thirteen CCC workers from South Philadelphia were dismissed today by officials of a camp at Amherst on charges of causing approximately 100 other workers to go on strike yesterday afternoon.

The men were placed aboard a train at 7:30 a. m. today and headed toward Philadelphia.

Capt. P. R. Collier, commandant of Camp No. 2356, where the walkout occurred, said the enrollees had been under observation as suspected "agitators" for several days. They were enlisted for CCC duty August 5, at South Philadelphia and forwarded to Virginia.

According to camp officials, the men complained that they were made to work too long, too hard and without sufficient rest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 23.—Local authorities, who for several years had turned their backs upon trains as they passed through filled with "hoboes," have launched a drive to break up the practice.

Yesterday Robert Brown and Albert Brooks, both of Petersburg, Va., were given 30-day jail sentences by Justice Walter Sleasman at Smithsburg. Four other train riders, William Scott, Hinton, W. Va.; Walter Wright, Philadelphia; Lester Hill, Smithsburg, Pa., and Willie Brown, Baltimore, were given 20-day jail sentences on the same charge.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Night Over Broadway.

New York, Aug. 23.

It is 11 o'clock at night and Broadway is getting hotly active . . . The real "heat" goes on at midnight in this curious village . . . A battery of powerful arc lights, mounted on trucks, plays on a huge sign: "Cecil B. DeMille presents 'The Crusaders'" . . . Probably when Cecil Blount DeMille was born, 54 years ago, he never dreamed that some day his name would be spelled out in Broadway electric lights . . . If he had ventured such an opinion to the residents of Ashford, Mass., they'd have laughed him out of town, but the Ashford boy made good in the big city . . . Today he's king of the spectacle pictures, ransacking the Bible for mighty themes to occupy the giant brush with which he paints his celluloid portraits . . . I dare say that Cecil Blount has thrown more Christians to the lions than any man in the industry, and he has been paid a pretty penny for it.

• • • •

It is getting on to 11:30, and the Stem quivers and pulses as the electric current courses through its veins . . . Only once do I remember Broadway ever dark at night . . . That was the time Thomas A. Edison died . . . In tribute to the great genius of watts and kilowatts, Broadway turned off its lights, and the darkened street became a giant ribbon of mourning . . . Only the lights of automobiles and taxicabs pierced the appalling gloom for one minute . . . It was an impressive tribute, turning off the lights for the man who made it possible to turn them on . . . Only one Broadwayite was unaffected by the salute to Edison . . . A blind beggar, his cane tapping a path in front of the darkened Hotel Astor, did not realize that the street suddenly had gone completely dark . . . It had never been other than dark to him.

• • • •

Midnight finds most of Broadway crowded into the Versailles, on Fiftieth street near Third avenue . . . This was the building and the very room which Anne Morgan and some of her social friends used in a futile experiment . . . In this room the Morgan clan and its affiliates erected a moving picture projection booth and installed comfortable chairs, filling the chairs with solid citizens who believed that a little theater of this type could skim the cream from the cinema milk . . . Miss Morgan's idea was that a selected program of pictures for a selected clientele would pay dividends sufficient to cover the operating costs . . . The idea flopped . . . The solid citizens got tired of the selected pictures . . . They preferred to go to the Paramount and the Capitol and the Roxy, and sit with audiences that were not selected . . . Now the sacred precincts house a supper club, the Versailles, and as we arrive, Cross and Dunn are about to sing their first song, for this is to be their grand premier.

• • • •

Henry Dunn is a large, 6-foot gentlemen, with a rollicking tenor voice often lifted in song at the Friars' Club, Loew's State Theater and other rendezvous for the intelligentsia of the Stem . . . Allen Cross is a small gentleman, leathery-faced from exposure to the sun and capable of so creasing his cheeks that he can portray any number of characters in keeping with the songs and the dialects he sings . . . Polished performers these two . . . By the time they've finished their second song, the audience has completely stilled and at the end of their fourth song, the House of Anne Morgan rocks to the applause that she had visioned when she started her policy of select cinema for select audiences . . . But Anne doesn't live there any more.

• • • •

Jack Dempsey's place is jammed as usual . . . At the moment, a troop of Boy Scouts is streaming in, and conscious of the Scoutmaster who leads them, the kids try to act very military, heads erect, shoulders back . . . But even the strictest disciplinarian can't triumph over boyish awe . . . As they pass the table at which Dempsey is seated, the youngsters can't resist the temptation to angle their eyes in his direction. . . . Later he autographs menus for each one of them, and when they march out, each one is clutching the important document close to his khaki shirt. . . . Just how many times Dempsey has signed his autograph since he opened the place is problematical, but it must run into hundreds of thousands.

• • • •

Jimmy Kelly's, in the village, was crowded when we arrived at 3 a. m., too late for the floor show . . . The eight girls who do eight different types of fan dances for Signor Kelly's patrons, now sit inactive and fully clothed on the sidelines . . . A fan dancer, fully dressed, is an unusual sight, but eight of 'em fully garbed, is a group photo that is spell-binding . . . "They don't like to put their clothes on," said Signor Kelly, plaintively, "and in this hot weather, I don't know as how I blame 'em, but etiquetee is etiquette." The eight fan dancers looked morosely at him. You could see they were pretty mad.

Night over Broadway . . . The most glamorous street in the world at its most exciting moment, midnight . . . Throughout the country, bells in church steeples are ringing out the hour and milkmen are harnessing their horses . . . But on Broadway, the pack is in full cry, for at midnight Broadway gets hot . . . There are no milkmen, but the dairy industry is represented by the butter-and-egg men of the world out for a good time.

State Board Seeks Unified PWA Setup

Asks to See Application for Federal Construction.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 23.—As one step in a movement to prepare a unified program for the use of Federal money in construction at State institutions, the Board of Public Works has adopted a resolution declaring that such applications must be submitted to the board before they may be considered official requests.

The resolution does not require that applications be submitted to the board, but it withholds official status from those submitted directly to the Federal authorities. Heads of institutions are not considered likely to make applications for funds without official sanction, particularly as the board is the body with power to allot the contingent fund.

A number of reasons for drawing up a unified program were advanced. Federal funds are allocated regionally, and if one institution gets a large allotment it may be at the expense of another which has a greater need, it was pointed out.

• Sending Sidney Skolsky, the famous Broadway columnist, 'way out West to cover Hollywood was just like ordering the society editor to report on a war. That was what the wiseacres were saying not so long ago. After all, they explained, Skolsky was pretty good at writing tintypes of Broadway characters, and getting stories in the night clubs, and all that sort of thing, but what would happen to him when Hollywood's press agents got hold of him, or the Klieg lights dazzled him, or he tried to understand a studio executive's English?

But those who laughed when he sat down at his typewriter are cheering lustily now, for Skolsky's Hollywood column is better, more varied, more amusing, than Hollywood itself. It's four-star stuff, with the smooth performance of a Myrna Loy, the direction of a Frank Capra, the glamour of a Cecil DeMille production, and the human interest of a Mickey Mouse cartoon.

In short, Sk

Cubs Trim Giants, 7-4; Cards Win Two, Cut Lead to One Game

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

ONE could almost—I said almost—sympathize with Goldie Ahearn the other evening at Griffith Stadium when he picked his chin up off his chest, left his seat at the ringside, threaded his way to Joe Smallwood's corner and pleaded with tearful eyes for Smallwood to make a fight out of it against Ken Overlin. Up to that point, Smallwood had been giving a fine imitation of Caspar Milquetoast in boxing gloves, and the timidness of the affair was rapidly producing insomnia among the 1,500 in the stands.

POVICH.

Goldie Ahearn, himself a fighter before he turned matchmaker, was no great shucks as a ripping, tearing fellow who kept busily punching and there were times when the snores among Washington fight crowds when Ahearn was boxing could not be distinguished from the boos at the inaction. Ahearn was a sleep-producer in his own right, but the fans, not his foes, were the victims.

But out there the other evening, Ahearn saw Smallwood ruining Ahearn's reputation as a matchmaker and souring 1,500 of the faithful on Ahearn's boxing cards. Thus it was in an excusable frenzy that he beseeched Smallwood to stop back-pedalling and start fighting. It was one of those tough breaks every boxing matchmaker fears, but must expect in the course of inhuman events. The wrestling promoter, by the very nature of his game, never is on that kind of a spot.

A bad match is poison to a boxing promoter's next card, but a wrestling promoter doesn't have that to worry about. They don't pay off on ability in wrestling. Throw two wrestlers in the ring and they can be the veriest palookas at wrestling, but they will put on a show. There is never any fear that two wrestlers will be mismatched, overmatched or undermatched. The instructions in the dressing room are the great levelers.

THIS department is not breaking any release date when it publishes herein tomorrow's release by Tiny Joe Holman, who beats the publicity tom-toms for Promoter Joe Turner, anent next Thursday's wrestling program at Griffith Stadium. After wading through approximately 150 words of Tiny Joe's high-powered blurb, I am still ignorant of just who will wrestle who or what. I give you what Joe Holman gave me:

"Rare entertainment is promised at Griffith Stadium Thursday night when Promoter Joe Turner continues wrestling operations with a splendidly assorted field of talent.

"Lodged on top of the card and promising the ultimate in action, thrills and acrobatics, will be the main event in which Wee Abie Coleman, diminutive Jewish Firecracker, pits his celebrated Kangaroo Kick against the equally potent and spectacular flying tackle originated and made famous by Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg.

"Both fiery principals are endowed with remarkable stamina and superlative showmanship. These popular performers will be backed by preliminaries of almost equal caliber. In the preliminaries . . . etc."

That still leaves me wondering who Wee Abie Coleman, the Jewish Firecracker, is going to wrestle. I know it is not Sonnenberg. It is somebody, apparently who uses Sonnenberg's flying tackle. Who that somebody is, Tiny Joe simply forgot to mention. Anyway, that shouldn't matter. Somebody will be wrestling somebody else at Griffith Stadium Thursday evening, and no matter how you slice it, it's still a wrestling match.

In Short.

The five leading wallopers in the American League took an awful wallop in their batting averages yesterday . . . combined, they made only four hits in 17 times at bat . . . Joe Vosmik getting one hit in four times up, Buddy Myer one hit in five times up, Jimmy Foxx and Roger Cramer one hit in four times at bat, and Hank Greenberg going hitless in four appearances . . . Joe Louis now rides in a $7,500 Lincoln limousine he purchased from the proceeds of his fight with King Levinsky . . . seventy fighters now hold District of Columbia licenses . . . twenty of them local fighters . . . the $800 cut in the receipts of the Canzoneri-Klick fight here in June put the Boxing Commission out of the red . . . Maj. Brown, police chief, who spurned the chairmanship of the Boxing Commission when it was organized, now will accept it . . . Arthur (Dutch) Bergman is the highest paid of Washington's college football coaches . . . Clark Griffith rejected an offer of $50,000 by the Chicago Cubs for Outfielder Dee Miles and Third Baseman Buddy Lewis two months ago when they were both with Chattanooga . . . Clarence Rowland, the Cubs' chief scout, reported that the pair were stand-outs in minor league ball . . . there is reason to believe that Donie Bush already has been signed as manager of the Cleveland Indians for 1936.

Gehrig's Clout In 13th Beats St. Louis

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 23.—A game that started out as a ptichers' battle between Lefty Gomez and Jimmy Walkup blew up in the thirteenth inning today when Lou Gehrig blasted a home run with two on base to give the Yankees a 6-to-3 victory over the Browns.

Russ Van Atta, sixth St. Louis pitcher, was the victim of the blast. Lou's second of the game, fourth of the series and twenty-third of the season. But Fay Thomas, who passed Johnny Murphy to put the first run on base in the thirteenth, was charged with the loss. Gehrig's first circuit swat came off Walkup in the fifth.

Detroit Victor; Rowe Gives Four Hits

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 23.—Schoolboy Rowe, driven from the box on Tuesday, came back in rare form today and shut out the Boston Red Sox, 6 to 0. He allowed Boston only four hits, and accounted for half of Detroit's run total by getting a double in the second inning with two men on bases and smashing out a home run in the fifth.

It was Rowe's third pitching assignment in six days. He shut out the New York Yankees on Sunday, but was hammered off the mound in an attempt to repeat against the Yankees on Tuesday.

All of Boston's four hits came in the first three innings, and except for a base on balls in the sixth, Rowe set the Sox down in order during the remainder of the game.

It was Rowe's fifteenth victory of the season.

Nats Nip Sox In 10th, 4-3, On Walk

Three on Base, Manush Is Forced In by Tietje for Winning Run.

Griffs Tie Score in 7th With 3 Tallies; Myer Ejected in Row.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—In a turbulent tenth inning that saw Buddy Myer banished from the game and Jake Powell drafted from the outfield to play second base, the Nats climaxed an uphill struggle to win their third straight game from the White Sox.

By a score of 4 to 3 the Nats won it, their winning margin representing a base on balls pitched to Pinch-hitter Johnny Stone by Les Tietje with the bases full in the tenth, but to Jake Powell and Jack Russell Washington owes its chief thanks.

Russell, relieving Bump Hadley in the eighth inning after the services of a pinch hitter had been required to bring the Nats three runs and deadlock the game, held the White Sox runless in the last three innings. It was the second fine turn of relief pitching received by the Nats in two days.

Powell Seals Victory.

But the Nats' victory was sealed by Jake Powell. Called from the outfield to play second base after Myer had been tossed from the game by Umpire Bill Dineen, the rookie Powell met the test on his first two chances in a big league infield and threw two White Sox runners out at first in the decisive tenth inning.

An error started the downfall of the White Sox in the tenth. When Shortstop Luke Appling bobbled Buddy Myer's grounder, Myer was safe at first with none out. Manush drove him to second on a single to center and Travis' bunt sacrificed both runners along. Strange grounded to Second Baseman Hayes and Myer attempted to score.

Umpire Bill Dineen at the plate made no immediate decision on the play and Myer started for the Nats' dugout in the belief he was safe. Then Dineen make known that he had called Myer out on Hayes' throw to Sewell. Angrily turning upon the umpire, Myer, Manager Harris and a half-dozen Nats upbraided him with the consequence that the Washington captain was ordered off the field.

Jimmy Starr's Debut.

With two out and the bases still full, Stone batted for Holbrook and drew four balls from Tietje to force Manush across the plate.

With Jimmy Starr, recruit from Albany, making his big league debut as the Nats' catcher in the tenth, Russell bent himself to the task of protecting the Nats' lead with Powell playing second.

Powell was not long in being tested. Radcliffe slapped the first pitch toward him and he came up cleanly with the ball to throw Radcliffe out. Simmons provided the second out with a grounder to Travis, but Dykes and Appling singled to put the tying run on third, the potential winning run on first. It was in this crisis that Powell fielded a hard drive by Hayes for the decisive out.

Hadley had yielded the Sox a 3-run lead before the Nats could produce a run. Al Simmons lofted a homer into the left-field stands in the first inning and singles by Fischer and Radcliffe helped the Sox to two more runs in the fifth.

Then matters began to break for the Nats. Travis led off the seventh with a double to left and with one

KENNETH N. PARKINSON.

Boxing Group Post Is Given Parkinson

Lawyer and War Veteran to Succeed Vandoren on Commission.

KENNETH N. PARKINSON, lawyer, soldier and sportman, was appointed yesterday to fill the unexpired term of the late Maj. Lucian H. Vandoren on the the District Boxing Commission. The commission probably will meet today to select a member to fill the chairmanship left vacant by Maj. Vandoren's death.

Parkinson, who is president of the Barristers Club, an organization of local attorneys, was born in Franklin, Idaho. He went to high school in Blackwood, Idaho, and from there moved to Arizona.

The new boxing commission member saw active service overseas during the war as a sergeant major. Shortly after the war, Parkinson entered George Washington University Law School.

Taught at Western.

In 1921, while still a student at George Washington, Parkinson worked as an instructor of mathematics at Western High School. While teaching at Western, he acted as assistant to the late George Green, then athletic instructor at the local high school.

Parkinson finished his law studies and started practicing law in 1923. He has played no active part in professional boxing, but always has been keenly interested in the sport.

Always Liked Sport.

"I have no ideas of how the boxing game should be revolutionized," he said yesterday. "I also realize I probably will make mistakes and plenty of them. I'm very glad to be actively identified with the sport, which I always have liked."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, who also is a member of the boxing commission, said yesterday a meeting might be called today to elect a chairman. Fred Buchloltz, the other member of the commission, is leaving Washington for a short trip tonight and, if possible, a chairman will be named before then.

Kantar, French Racing Star, Is Bought by Labrot Estate

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 23.—To take the place of Imp. Sir Greysteel, stallion which was destroyed about two months ago after he had broken a leg while at play in his paddock, the Labrot estate, owner and operator of Holly Beach Farm, near Annapolis, has purchased the 10-year-old French horse, Kantar.

This son of Alcantara II from Karabe, she by Chousberski, is reported to be held in high esteem by European breeders.

Kantar is expected to arrive at Holly Beach, Maryland's most elaborate breeding establishment, about the middle of next month.

The price paid for Kantar was not revealed, nor, according to Sylvester W. Labrot, speaking for the heirs of the late Sylvester W. Labrot, will it be revealed. It is believed, however, that the price ran somewhere between $50,000 and $75,000.

Kantar was the best two-year-old of his year, winning each of his four starts, the Prix Launay, the Prix La Fleche, the Prix Morny and the Grand Criterium.

At three, Kantar raced successfully, winning the Prix Biennial, the Prix Henri Delamarre, the Prix de L'Arc de Triomphe and finishing second in the French Derby and third in the Prix Lupin.

At four, he won three stakes and placed second to the great Ortello in the Prix de L'Arc de Triomphe.

Kantar was raced in partnership by Lord Derby and the late Ogden Mills, father of the former Secretary of the Treasury, and of Lady Granard, from whom the Labrot estate bought him.

Welsh Plays Today for 2 Titles

Champion Gains Final in U. S. Public Parks Singles, Doubles.

Faces Big Ten King for Crown; McElvenny in Tandem Duel.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 23.—Virtually in a class by himself so far as this tournament is concerned, Barney Welsh, of Washington, D. C., drew within one round of his second straight National Public Parks tennis championship here today by eliminating William Lurie, of New York, 6—3, 6—1, 6—4.

The former Duke University tennis star stormed through his semi-final match with the same overpowering attack, either off the ground or on the volley, which has seen him sweep through five straight matches without the loss of a set. In fact, the Washington man has not yet been taken to a deuce set.

Tomorrow the champion will play William Schommer, young collegian from Minneapolis, for the championship. Schommer, who holds the Big Ten championship, sprang the big surprise of the tournament today by trouncing Arnold Simons, of Louisville, seeded No. 2, in straight sets, 7—5, 6—2, 6—2. The five-time champion was no match for the Minnesota representative.

Gain Doubles Final.

Welsh looms decidedly as a champion on two fronts. With his hard-volleying partner, Ralph McElvenny, another Washington player, providing able assistance, the champ smothered Roswell Lee and Hudson Hamm, of Miami, in the semi-finals, 6—4, 6—4, 6—2, and tomorrow the Capital pair will meet Billy Hughes and Cecil Metz, of Memphis.

Hughes and Metz established their right to enter the final with a straight-set victory over the 1934 doubles champions, Schommer and Charles Britzius, also of Minneapolis, who collapsed by scores of 6—4, 6—4, 7—5.

In an upset, Lydia Kayser, Buffalo, trounced Mrs. Ruth Prosser, St. Louis, the defending women's singles champion, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2, to gain the right to battle another strong hitter, Elizabeth Deike, of Pasadena, Calif., in the final Sunday.

Miss Deike gained the title round with a straight-set victory over Helen Germaine, New York, 6—3, 7—5.

Frank Shields, Parker Win In Doubles

By the United Press.

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass., Aug. 23.—Americans scored three decisive victories in three major international clashes today in the men's and women's national doubles tennis championships at Longwood Cricket Club.

Frank X. Shields, of New York and Hollywood, and Frankie Parker, of Lawrenceville, N. J., scored the outstanding triumph when they ousted the last remaining foreign threat, Roderick Menzel, of Czechoslovakia, and Enrique G. Maier, of Spain, in the quarter-finals of the final competition. The scores were 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, 9—7.

The other men's match today was an all-American affair, fourth seeded Henry Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., defeating the indoor champions, Gregory Mangin and Berkeley Bell, of New York, 6—3, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.

Meet Allison, Van Ryn.

Culley and Hines meet the ex-champions, Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, tomorrow, with Parker and Shields opposing Don Budge and Gene Mako, of California.

The women's doubles semifinals were a triumph for the American over the British Wightman Cup squad.

Helen Jacobs and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, the defending champions, defeated Nancy Lyle and Evelyn M. Dearman, of England, 8—6, 6—4. Kay Stammers and Freda James, aces of the British squad, went down to a surprisingly swift defeat at the hands of the second-flight Americans, Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., 6—3, 8—6.

FOR eight solid hours, 2,000 of of Washington's young Americans—2,000 Tom Sawyers and Huck Finns radiating sporting blood from the tops of their tousled heads to the soles of their many bare and stockinged feet—ran and jumped in Central High's sunbathed stadium yesterday matching stout hearts and sturdy legs for the 1935 playground track and field championship which finally went to 75 Northeast boys representing Sherwood Playground.

Coached by rosy-cheeked Joe Mitchell, popular District football and basket ball official and keen student of sports, Sherwood repulsed the attempt of Virginia Avenue's defending champions to repeat their triumph of last year, as well as outclassing 60 other playgrounds.

The new champions stretched their winning margin to more than 8 points by winning the last race of the day, the 100-pound 160-meter relay, and running their point total up to 36 2-5 points as compared with Virginia Avenue's 28, Rosedale, another Northeast playground, and four times consecutive winner until last year, was third with 19 points.

The meet set a new mark for record breaking, eight standards falling during the morning and afternoon. One of the new records was set in the unlimited, unrestricted class conducted as a separate meet and won by Eckington

Cards Win Two To Advance On Giants

Defeat Dodgers, 6-1, 11-5, to Slice League Lead to One Game.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 23.—The Cardinals clawed their way up to within one game of the league-leading New York Giants today when they pinned a double defeat upon the Dodgers, 6 to 1, and 11 to 5, while the Giants were dropping a decision to the Chicago Cubs.

The Cards smacked Lefty Watson Clark freely in the opener, piling up 15 hits, while Ed Huesser, pitching-ing his first complete game in the majors, held the Dodgers in check. Then they went on against a trio of flingers, Emil Leonard, Bobby Reis and Tom Baker, for 17 more blows in the second game.

St. Louis had to come from behind to win both games, but the situation in the first never was serious. Brooklyn led, 1-0, up to the fourth inning, when doubles by Virgil Davis and Leo Durocher, with a pass to Terry Moore, Heusser's fly, and a wild throw by Buzz Boyle gave the cards three runs and the lead.

Add Three More Runs.

They added a run to it in the sixth and two more in the ninth, when Heusser and Martin hit triples.

The struggle from behind was somewhat more difficult in the afterpiece when Bill Hallahan proved ineffective and yielded four runs in the first two innings. Phil Collins stepped in and blanked the Dodgers with three hits in the last seven innings, while the Cards worked up to the boiling point in the sixth and splashed all over the place with a seven-run rally that won the game.

Cora Kay Wins at Cumberland After Pace Setters Collide

$13.30 Shot 4-Length Victor

Arctic Land Swings Into Lone Miss, Is Second; $93.30 Double.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 23.—Eddie Smith, the Northeast Washington boy who has been making his own breaks while leading the jockeys here, had one presented to him this afternoon. The generous party was the filly, Arctic Land. Smith, who had the mount on Cora Kay, was in a pocket on the rail and there was no immediate prospect of his getting out. Arctic Land and Lone Miss were battling for the lead as the field approached the clubhouse turn with Cora Kay third.

But for the fact that Arctic Land is a home-loving filly, she probably would have won the race. However, as she came to the gap in the fence where she comes off the track in the morning after her workouts, she bolted for the opening as Jockey Palumbo tried in vain to make her bank the turn. As she swung for the outside, Arctic Land bumped Lone Miss, throwing Jockey Bastone to the track.

Pays $13.30 Mutuel.

In the meanwhile, Smith and Cora Kay tended strictly to their knitting along the rail. Before Palumbo could straighten out his mount, Cora Kay had gained a commanding lead and it was a mere formality for Smith to hand ride the $13.30 shot to the wire to win by four lengths. Arctic Land managed to save second money. Rapidup was third.

Smith was riding his third straight winner of the day before a crowd of 6,000. After being beaten a nose as Tuleyries Wand bowed to Lodorus, a $6.20 proposition, the Capital boy had Flosilda, an odds-on favorite, under him in the second race and he made every post a winning one. Flosilda led Loch London and Staff Officer to the wire to pay $3.10 to win and a like figure to place.

$93.30 Daily Double.

A daily double of $93.30 was completed with the running of the third race with Smith again shining in the saddle. This time he was assigned Hurdy Gurdy, and the Smith Brothers couldn't have done a better job with the filly. She was a rather obscure member of the field of eight for the first trip around, but when the real racing came on the swing for the stretch, she came to the outside and defeated, among others, Running Water, Swinlane and Wise Money, a disappointing favorite. The Smithites cashed a $28 transaction.

Jockey Palumbo and Owner Bernard Bond salvaged some of the day's honors in the fifth race, when Small Change set a track record for the 5-furlong course. The oft-tied mark of 0:56 was replaced by one of 0:55 3-5. Stool Pigeon and Ada Wan were closest at the finish with Smith nowhere in particular with Outbreak.

Smith's luck failed him in the sixth race, and he was left at the post on Dark Law. Crossing Over led all the way under the handling of Jockey J. Hernandez.

Pukka Heaven and Fred's Warning were second and third. The winner paid $6.60.

Pergola won the day's finale, in which Smith failed to figure.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIGHT WAD, $12.30, $4.20, $2.70; PREFER, $3.40, $2.60; HIDDEN LORE, $3.10.

TIGHT WAD was not hurried during the early stages, began moving up in the last half mile, responded gamely to urging in the stretch, wore down PREFER and drew clear at the end. PREFER forced the early pace, went to the front nearing the half-mile ground and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to keep pace, although closing stoutly. HIDDEN LORE, reserved early, moved up in the last three furlongs, but was no match for the first two.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Cumberland, Md., Aug. 23.

Although the program called for only seven races today, there were eight. The eighth race was run first. Early this morning conversation around the secretary's office turned to the speed of the various lead ponies. Eddie Brennan, racing secretary, decided to settle all arguments but putting up a $5 purse for a race at an eighth of a mile, with trainers to ride. The word spread around like wildfire. With Brennan as the starter and Judges Shea and Turner in their places, the field of four was off. Happy, the pony that leads the horses to the post in the afternoon, took the lead at the start under Chuck Frost's urging, and he stayed there all the way. Bowes Bond, after being shut off several times, finally brought Yellow to the wire second ahead of George Cook aboard Diamond. Billy, a former trotter, was fourth and last. Billy wouldn't trot and he wouldn't gallop for Doug Hutt. The horseman agreed that Billy "needed the race." Bond made no claim of foul, and Jimmy Wallace, the jockey agent de luxe, said Billy was shooed in. Frost was given a saliva test after the rest and all they found was hamburger and pink lemonade. Clocker Mike made book, got mixed up on his figures and lost his breakfast money. BILL.

First race—Amijo is the one of the best juveniles on the grounds. Closed nicely to take that last and gets the call despite top weight. Keyed Up, a recent winner, and Lady Windsor appear best of the others.

Second race—Canteret would add another purse to her list if taken off the also eligible list. This filly has done everything asked hereabouts. Aella has her speed and appears second best. She is first on the added list. Mazyniata seems to have an edge on the others.

Third race—Gagne would be a stern factor here if sent to acton. Gets in with only steadying weight and I see no reason for mistakes. Marge is cheap but so are the others. Mint Bud and The General hold some chance.

Fourth race—Bread King gets the call here. Asked to carry 104 pounds with an apprentice rider. I'm stringing along. Inscription is another of those fit Bond horses. Manuel has worked well and is Clocker Mike's special.

Fifth race—Repeal will have Eddie Smith in the saddle. This fellow seems to have returned to top form and may be the one to catch. Pencader is not at his best on the small course but is a contender. Don A Ducin for the rest.

Sixth race—Jambalaya seems to have found the right spot. Not too heavily weighed. I expect this one to take a set of brackets. Valdosta's last was a good effort. Flageolet has had little action of late but is a possible upsetter.

Seventh race—Doubtless, winner of two in a row, will have Smith aboard again and seems to be capable of holding these safe. Bendromet failed his backers last out. Crossed Wires for the show.

Dr. Allen's Royal Wonder Is Adjudged Berryville Champion

5,000 Attend Final Day's Program

Mrs. Whitney's Horses Dominate Events as Show Closes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BERRYVILLE, Va., Aug. 23.—A real champion was crowned here today to conclude the thirty-fourth annual exhibition of the Berryville Horse Show before a crowd of 5,000 persons.

Royal Wonder, a 3-year-old brown gelding from Dr. L. M. Allen's Clifton Stables, of Clarke County, vied with his stablemate, Clifton's Rose, 5-year-old, for the honor of being champion. Both thoroughbreds had amassed a total of eight eligible points during the two days to their credit for the championship and were judged on conformation, with Royal Wonder being declared champion.

A cool southern breeze blew across the arena the entire day making the weather ideal for the sport.

Only One Accident.

Only one accident occurred. Johnny Furr, of Middleburg, fell in the last race when his saddle slipped astride Gen. William Mitchell's Fauconnier. He was not seriously injured.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Llangollen, Upperville, was easily the outstanding winning owner today. Her Glory Road captured the green hunter class in a field of 29 high class horses.

Mrs. Whitney's second victory came in the middle and heavyweight hunter class, her Kinprillis taking top honors. Her Bon Diable was fourth. Her hunt team, composed of Cypress de Beau, Spring Hope and Nobodys Fool, created a mild sensation when this entry outclassed her second entry of Two Leggins, Kinprillis and Bon Diable.

Wins Hunter Class.

Royal Wonder, with two victories yesterday, took care of the Clarke County hunter class and was second in the green hunter class.

Featuring today's card was the Corinthian class, won by Safingle, the property of Turner Wiltshire. Mrs. Whitney's Spring Hope and Kinprillis and Dr. Allen's Petite Poule followed in order.

Madrigal Tom, a 7-year-old chestnut gelding owned by Mrs. Anna F. Hedrick, of Clarendon, scored in the touch-and-out event. Mrs. Hedrick rode her horse over a five-foot jump to win over Spring Miss, owned by Robert and John Riticor, of Oatlands, Va.

E. L. Redmon, of Middleburg, took three of the four halfbreds suitable to become hunter classes, winning the yearling two-year-old and three-year-old events. Charles S. Hurst, of Boyce, captured the foal class in this division.

Heavy Draft Classes.

Llangollen Farm took care of the heavy draft classes, winning the two and four horse team classes, while Messrs. Mitchell, Lee and Dougherty showed the best heavy draft stallion.

In th pony classes, Queen of Sheba, owned by Stanley Greene 2d, captured the riding class, but failed in the jumping event when Pale Face, the property of L. R. Colbert, of Fredericksburg, negotiatd a four-foot jump, a height usually reserved for seasoned hunters. Queen of Sheba also cleared the bar, but was disqualified.

out Strange scored him with a single to center. Holbrook prolonged the rally by beating out a grounder to Appling and Pinch-Hitter Red Kress came off the bench to deliver a single to center that scored Strange. Dee Miles contributed the Nats' fourth hit of the inning, a single to center that tied the score at 3-3.

The use of a pinch hitter brought Russell into action and twice he helped to turn back the Sox runless by his clever fielding of bunts that converted attempted sacrifices into force plays at second. Eventually came the tenth and you know what happened.

Alibi Exploded, Baer's Hands Called Fit

Claims of Injury a Hoax, Commission Doctors Discover.

By Edward J. Neil,

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Max Baer's alibi that he couldn't whip Jimmy Braddock in defense of the heavyweight championship because his hands were hurt went the way of most fistic allbis today.

A group of New York State Athletic Commission doctors reported that examination of a dozen plates showed the former heavyweight champion's hands hadn't been injured in years, let alone this summer.

As a result Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, notified Mike Jacobs it was all right to go ahead with Baer's battle of redemption against Joe Louis, the Negro sensation, from Detroit, in the Yankee Stadium here September 24.

Aged Fracture Revealed.

"The X-rays showed signs of fractures several years old, such as almost every fighter has after years in the ring," Phelan said in announcing the doctors' findings. "Bony callouses have formed around those old breaks and now his hands, in that respect, actually are stronger than before they were broken. The plates showed old dislocations, but no sign of an injury that might have happened as recently as the Braddock fight."

Baer's frantic alibi, offered as soon as he lost the title and generally accepted as one of the reasons for his weak showing against Braddock, thus joined Primo Carnera's famous fractured ankle alibi, which the Italian giant blamed for his loss of the title to Baer.

That one exploded when prying reporters discovered that the X-ray pictures of Carnera's fracture were pretty examples of the kind of injuy a man gets when he falls from a height and lands stiff-legged on his heel, the kind of injury seldom repaired. Many things happened to Primo in the ring with Baer that night, but falling off a ladder was not one of them. The actual sitter for that ankle portrait never was discovered.

Meanwhile Baer was back in Speculator, N. Y., today resuming training for his comeback against the powerful Negro. He starts boxing this week-end.

Julian Black Bared As Louis' Manager

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 23.—Joe Louis, Detroit's Negro contender for the heavyweight boxing championship, surprised a crowded courtroom today by testifying that John Roxborough, Negro attorney, is not his fight manager.

The fighter was called as a witness in proceedings brought by Mrs. Dora Roxborough to discover Roxborough's income as part of a pending divorce action. The lawyer has appeared in numerous fight negotiations for the "Brown Bomber."

Louis testified he has never had any manager other than Julian Black, of Chicago; that he had never paid Roxborough anything, and that Roxborough's name did not appear on any of his contracts.

"Out Fishin'"

By Jack Hawley.

THE largest number of reports received by this writer for this week arrived by phone, telegraph and mail between late Thursday night and Friday noon. These reports are exceedingly gratifying, in that, not one contained anything but glowing remarks of the ravenous appetites of all species of fish who undoubtedly have been awaiting favorable feeding conditions. The wind at this writing is in the north, very unfavorable for fishing but is not an indication that it will remain so and no doubt will change before many hours.

From Herring Bay, Colonial Beach, Solomons Island, Piney Point, Plum Point, Tilghmans Island, Kenwood Beach, Westland, Messick, Reedville and other places word is received of large catches. Rock fishing is very good at Colonial Beach and Tall Timbers. Other rock fishing grounds are equally as good however. Trout are running very large and this is probably due to the increase in their food supply—the Norfolk spot which arrived in the upper Potomac about a week ago. L. S. Corbin, of Quimby, Va., writes in that fishing is very good at present. Incidentally this place can boast of a wide variety of fish, including the flounder weighing up to 11 pounds. Mr. Corbin's phone number is repeated for the convenience of Washington anglers, many of whom have taken advantage of his services in the past few weeks: Belle Haven 104-F-23.

Mr. George B. Pratt, of 1742 K street northwest, sends in an excellent picture of 29 rock fish caught while fishing with Capt. Dewey Parkinson aboard his boat, the Gypsy Queen, and his companions, Harry Blandy, jr., H. H. Blandy, R. Ingersoll, L. M. Kelly, Hugh Goldman and "Dad" Pratt. The total weight registered 160 pounds, the two largest rockfish weighing 11½ and 13¾ pounds.

Bluefishing reports on S. W. Middles for Thursday and Friday are authentic and thrilling; both chumming and trolling are producing excellent results. The former, however, is getting the most fish. The blues are all "whoppers." To date Capt. Bob Drury is leading in number of bluefish caught on a single trip. 'Bob' uses the chumming method quite extensively and this is not a true scale of judgment on the capabilities of other and equally skilled boatmen in his neighborhood, who from necessity (lack of alewives) have resorted to trolling entirely. Chum is plentiful in St. Jerome Creek but the boatmen just won't set a net or two to procure it, either from lack of time (which is doubtful) or nets being not available for this purpose. We would like to know the reason. Perhaps next year, if the purse netters don't beat them to it, they will consider the anglers' requests.

Prospects Promising.

Baltimore, Aug. 23 (AP).—Fishing prospects for the Chesapeake Bay over the week-end are promising, it appeared today from reports received by the State conservation commission. Fresh-water fishing, hampered during the week by muddy waters, is expected to be good if the streams clear.

Plenty of rock and blue fish and trout were reported at Solomons Island. Bass fishing in Allegany County and on the Eastern Shore was reported good, while Frederick waters are expected to clear and provide large catches. Conditions in the upper bay were reported as very good.

Meet Laurels Annexed by Sherwood

Eight Records Are Broken; 2,000 Youths Parade, Then Compete.

Playground, which dethroned Garfield, last year's winner in this division.

Rivaling the competition itself, be it the track, field or pit, was the parade which opened the big carnival at 10 a. m. For the striking and the significant, it is doubtful if all the races put together were more impressive than the spirited procession which preceded them.

Kids from one end of the city to the other wound in motley but happy array around the stadium. Tall kids, short kids, stocky kids, skinny kids—kids with nothing but trunks on, kids with sweaters and corduroys on—red-headed kids, tow-headed kids, barefooted kids, well-shod kids and kids with stockings open at toe and heel, all making up a procession which would have made the rifle-bearing young legions of Hitler and Mussolini look sadly out of place in the same surroundings.

2,000 Take Oath.

When the parade, more than half a mile long, finally ended, scattered in groups around the football field with the National Training School band in the middle, each of the 2,000, as it were, took the oath of Washington's "Little Olympics," collectively through George Shorb of Garfield Playground, selected as the "typical playground boy."

One of the few youngsters "dressed up" for the occasion, the cleancut Shorb lad, 18 years old, wearing a white coat and neat dark trousers, stepped to the microphone of the flawless amplifying system, and voiced the playground oath while silence reigned through the stadium for the sole moment during the eight hours. The oath went as follows:

"We are interested in and advocate clean sport. We have been taught by our playground directors that we must accept the decision of the judges, congratulate our conquerors and be gracious in victory. Our word is pledged that it shall be so."

Miss Baker Talks.

Miss Sybil Baker, gracious supervisor of playgrounds, spoke for an instant, singling out each of the four "conferences," Northern, Southern, Eastern and Western, for its own bit of praise and encouragement with prolonged cheering greeting each salutation.

Then began the meet itself, with all its burning rivalry making itself felt virtually from the start. For Virginia Avenue it can be said it battled like a champion, outshining even the winning Sherwoodians in point of number of records broken, setting two new marks to Sherwood's one.

From the start the 1934 champs were on the spot, with Sherwood, Rosedale, Johnson and Cooke leading the drive to bump them off. It was the mass strength of the Sherwood team, largest in the stadium and combed from the thickly populated Northeast section around Ninth and G streets, which eventually brought it its title. Second and third places counted heavily in running up its point total.

Sherwood's relay strength also counted heavily, the team taking two thirds, a second and a first for 10 points, while Virginia Avenue was taking but 5 points in the team races.

Highest Target Title Won by Southerner

Florida Railroader, 51, Is Awarded Handicap at Vandalia.

By the Associated Press.

VANDALIA, Ohio, Aug. 23.—J. B. Royall, of Tallahassee, Fla., 51-year-old railway conductor, attended his first Grand American trapshoot today, and when the smoke cleared away he had defeated 614 of the Nation's best marksmen to win trapdom's most prized title, the Grand American Handicap.

The Southerner, first resident of Florida ever to win the blue ribbon event, broke 98 of 100 targets to tie S. G. Vance, of Tillsonburg, Ontario, in the regulation shoot, and then broke 47 out of 50 to win the shoot-off, the Canadian missing four targets.

Both leaders fired from the 20-yard mark, and their 98 gave them a two-target edge over the rest of the field.

Joe Hiestand, of Hillsboro, Ohio, national singles and doubles champion, wound up in third place after a shoot-off with Albert Suttle, of Petersburg, Va., and Dorsie Arnold, of Lebanon, Ohio. The trio was knotted at 96 out of 100 in the 100 target class. Arnold took fourth place, and Suttle, fifth.

The women's championship went to Mrs. "Bunny" Sanders, of Keyser, W. Va., who broke 90 out of 100 from the 18-yard-mark. Mrs. Sanders, of the world's champion husband and wife team, nosed out Mrs. Lela Hall, of East Lynne, Mo., and Mrs. Russell Elliott, Ryetoen, Mo., fellow club members by a lone target, they getting 89 out of 100.

C. T. Stevens, of Zanesville, Ohio, won the professional championship by breaking 94 out of 100 from the 23-yard line.

Canoes Disabled In Chester Races

Doeller's Craft Scores in Starboat Event.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., Aug. 23.—Two famed Chesapeake Bay log canoes—one a winner and the other a favorite—came to grief in the Chester River Yacht Club's regatta today when a spanking breeze snapped their masts.

The favored Island Bird was forced out early in the opening race by the breaking of one of her masts. The Mayflower, skippered by Howard B. Strong, of Chestertown, finished first.

Taking advantage of the intent battle waged by Patsy and Nina Raskob, daughters of John Raskob, former Democratic national committeeman, Donald Doeller, of Gibson Island, brought his Restless II in first in the starboat race.

Clubowner Denies That Pitts Will G[o]

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 23.—Joe Cambria, owner of the Albany (N. Y.) Senators, is "delighted" with the performance of Alabama Pitts and has "no idea" of either selling or trading the former Sing Sing athlete, he said today in denying reports Pitts was not doing so well with Albany.

"Pitts will not be sold or traded," asserted the International League club owner. "I am delighted with his performance. I think it is wonderful that a man can come out of jail after six years there and bat around .240.

"Not only will we keep Pitts this year but we will keep him next year. I am expecting great things of him."

Harrisonburg Nips All-Star Nine, 8-7

Hack Wilson's Aggregation Bows in Inter-Loop Tilt.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 23.—Harrisonburg Valley Leaguers defeated the Shenandoah County League All-Stars, plus Hack Wilson, here last night, 8 to 7.

It was "Lefty Hutchinson Night" and Harrisonburg's stellar southpaw was presented with a purse raised by local fans. Hack Wilson made the presentation. Hutchinson then went to the mound and held the visitors hitless for one inning. Bill Schmidt, who hurled eight innings for Harrisonburg, was touched for seven hits.

Wilson, former home run king of the National League, clouted a double in the first inning, but after that he did no damage to the Valley Leaguers, fanning twice and popping up in his fourth trip to the plate. Wilson aimed at the distant right-field fence but to no avail.

Spirited Rally Carries Wheat 3 Cents Higher

Eastern Houses Buyers on Unfavorable Crop Developments.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—The wheat market rallied sharply today to the accompaniment of bullish foreign political and crop news. Prices jumped three cents a bushel above opening low figures as concentrated buying through Eastern commission houses came into the pit. Southern Hemisphere crop advices were distinctly bullish and war gossip showed no signs of abating.

Easing from the day's highs, wheat closed ½ to 1 cent above the previous finish. December 91⅝@91¾, and corn was ⅜ to ⅞ up, December 56⅝@56¾. Oats closed unchanged to ⅜ higher, rye was ¼ up and barley was steady.

The opening trend in wheat was sharply downward, prices dropping around a cent on weakness of Liverpool wheat and a break in domestic cotton prices, but broadened speculative buying came into the market. Broomhall's Argentina agent cabled it was the general opinion the Argentine acreage would show between 9,800,000 and 12,300,000 compared with 18,804,000 last year. Crop advices from another normally major exporting nation, Australia, also were pessimistic, with dry weather continuing. Foreign wheat offerings abroad were marked up sharply.

Corn deliveries were higher most of the session and oats followed wheat action. Lard scored moderate gains despite hog weakness.

July Acceptances Continue Decline

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 23.—The volume of bankers' dollar acceptances continued to decline during July, and at the end of the month the amount outstanding was down to $320,890,746, the American Acceptance Council reported today.

This figure compared with $343,285,933 outstanding at the end of June and $515,604,714 at the end of July, 1934.

The council pointed out that even in normal times when the acceptance volume totaled $1,000,000,000 or more, July was always the low point of the year in acceptance credit demand.

Lower Cotton Loan Boosts Board Seats

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—With the Government's announcement that it would loan only 9 cents a pound to cotton growers this season, against 12 cents on the 1934 crop, a New York Cotton Exchange seat sold today at $11,000, an advance of $1,500 above the previous sale. The theory was that the lower loan level would tend to restore a free market, and more active trading.

Am. Smelting To Fund Issue Of $36,383,300

New Bonds Will Be Taken by 5 Life Insurance Companies.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 23.—American Smelting & Refining Co. announced today it will redeem at par on October 1 all its outstanding 5 per cent mortgage bonds aggregating $36,383,300.

Funds for the redemption will be raised through the issuance of new 4 per cent bonds amounting to $25,000,000 and $5,000,000 of bank loans.

The new bonds will not be offered publicly, but will be placed privately with five life insurance companies.

The refunding operation, which will reduce the company's annual debt service substantially represents one of the more important transactions of this nature that have occurred this year between corporations and investment institutions dealing directly with one another.

The bonds to be refunded originally were issued in 1917. Since 1930 they have been redeemable at par on 30 days' notice. The bonds closed on the Stock Exchange yesterday at 101 and opened today at 100¾.

Home Building Gains, Public Works Lag

New York, Aug. 23 (AP).—Standard Statistics Co in a survey of building and real estate conditions, says that while continued gains in residential operations are bolstering building activity, "it is becoming increasingly evident that this year's public works operations will fail to equal earlier expectations."

The survey adds that "the sharp uptrend in private undertakings is distinctly favorable, and the public works projects which have been merely postponed by conflicting policies will contribute to gains next spring."

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Public Utility Stocks Break, but Steels Move Ahead —Drop in Cotton Fails to Halt Wheat —Dollar Hardens.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 23.—Markets offered plenty of excitement for bulls and bears. Cotton and public utility shares broke badly, but industrial stocks and grains moved forward. Cotton at one time was down about $4 a bale. September wheat closed 1 cent a bushel lower at 89⅞ cents a bushel. Turnover in stocks was moderate.

Before the opening the markets were greeted with two decidedly unfavorable bits of news. One was the agreement by both houses of Congress on a form of public utility holding company regulatory bill that virtually means the dissolution of most holding companies, whatever the camouflage in wording. That, at least, was the interpretation placed upon it by utility leaders, and the market for utility stocks broke 1 to 3 points at the start. On longer term and optimistic consideration, it may yet be possible to mitigate the effects of the measure, through possible later amendment or repeal, provided a turn comes in the election winds, or through leniency in application by SEC.

Just the same, and for all the extenuating circumstances of a few mismanaged holding companies, the measure points strongly in the direction of Government interference with legitimate business in an unwarranted manner; toward indifference to steps that may be taken to promote business recovery when they interfere with purely punitive motives. Business and finance, in short, still has reason to suspect that it "is in for it" with the New Dealers.

Cotton Dole.

The other upsetting news was the announcement by the Government that in lieu of straight 12-cent loans on cotton (which amount to Government purchase of cotton at 12 cents a pound), loans of only 9 cents a pound would be made. Planters will be given their full dole, just the same, as the Government, in addition to the 9-cent loan, will make up any part of the extra 3 cents to planters who may sell their crop under 12 cents a pound.

Cotton broke badly on the news, partly because of the obvious incentive it would give to dump cotton now, and to increase planting. On economic grounds, no loan at all but a straight 12 cents a pound gift to farmers would be preferable to hocus-pocus, as exhaustion of the Treasury would soon put a stop to attempts to regulate cotton production and prices. The cotton experiment must be abandoned in the end, and if it is done soon it might be possible to salvage a far larger portion of our disappearing foreign markets than will be possible later.

The cotton belt has a firm grip around the Treasury's middle, and what squeezing remains to be done will be well taken care of by the wheat growers and the silver miners. That markets in general are standing up so well under the pressure is the growing indication that inflation will be the only way out.

In the foreign exchanges the dollar continued to rise, although a further fall in Government bonds suggested that the hardening dollar came not from a strengthening of the Government's credit position. On the contrary, the haste of Congress to approve any and all bills aimed at lifting the public debt and in the general direction of inflation is hurting credit. The Treasury 2⅞ per cent issue, which had been intended as a means of refunding the Liberty Loan this autumn, fell below par. That removes, for the time being at least, the possibility of using so low a coupon. The Treasury scarcely can do better than to issue a 3 per cent bond to retire the remainder of the Libertys, an announcement on which is expected next week.

Best Bet.

Use of credit still is slack. New York banks this week reported a moderate expansion in commercial loans, along with a small drop in brokers' loans, but there was a further shrinkage in acceptance credits last month, as reported today by the American Acceptance Council Money in circulation this week rose slightly, and probably will expand over the next few weeks incidental to the harvests and the reopening of the schools.

Meanwhile the rise in the dollar, it would appear, comes from weakness of other currencies. The Bank of England is accumulating more gold, Italy is acting more belligerent, and the condition of foreign government bonds suggests growing nervousness of capital over the European outlook. Under the circumstances it is not to be wondered at that foreign money is flowing into our money and investment markets. American securities still look to be the best bet.

Stock Movements.

Steel stocks continued to rise in spite of a sharp break in public utility issues. Utilities in large volume fell from 1 to 3 points at the opening and made little recovery. Their weakness was due to a special cause and it failed greatly to upset other parts of the list, just as the fall in cotton left wheat and stocks unaffected. U. S. Steel sold at a new high level. Otis and a few others did likewise, after a weakish opening. The market had many favorites in various groups. Manville, Case, Chrysler, Allied Chemical and Westinghouse were samples. Motor shares generally were firm. Silvers and coppers looked good. Rails were quiet except for New York Central and Delaware & Hudson, which found a determined demand.

Refunding.

The turn for the better in copper, lead and silver seems to have helped to ripen refunding plans of American Smelting & Refining. Announcement today of call for $36,000,000 in bonds was accompanied by a firm market for the shares. The Anaconda financing, however, is believed to be some distance off.

Bunk.

As cotton traders now put it: "Don't bank on Bankhead." Congress has made it illegal to circulate tips on stocks, but apparently anything goes in cotton, wheat and silver, so long as the tips point upward. And so long as a Congressman does the tipping.

So. Cal. Edison Plans an Issue Of $57,500,000

Bonds and Debentures to Refund Old 5%s and Preferred Stock.

Southern California Edison Co., Ltd., filed yesterday with the Securities and Exchange Commission registration statements covering $30,000,000 of first and refunding mortgage 4 per cent bonds, due 1960, and $27,500,000 of 2½ and 3½ per cent debentures, maturing in one to ten years. The proceeds from sale of the new securities will be used to refund $29,300,000 of refunding mortgage 5 per cent bonds, due in 1934 and $24,000,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock, which the company plans to call for payment.

Los Angeles, Aug. 23. — In announcing the proposed financing of Southern California Edison Co., Harry J. Bauer, president, said:

"This refunding operation will result in a strengthening of the position of the company's first and refunding mortgage bonds through the addition of further restrictive provisions with respect to the insurance of mortgage bonds. Under the new escrow provisions, the issuance on bonds is limited to 66 2-3 per cent of new property as compared with 75 per cent previously, and no additional bonds may be issued unless earnings are equivalent to 2½ times interest charges including charges on bonds to be issued, as compared with the original requirement of only 1¾ times.

"The retirement of the company's 7 per cent preferred stock is clearly desirable because of the high dividend rate."

Culbertson on Bridge

The Breeches Buoy.

A bridge player who deliberately blocks himself out of a hand that can furnish him with discards deserves no sympathy, for his fate is due to his own blunders. The player who finds himself unable to reach dummy's riches and is therefore set deserves sympathy, but sympathy is a small offset to the penalty his opponents gleefully score above the line. To the player who is apparently cut off from dummy, but ingeniously contrives a breeches buoy to carry him over, go not only the plaudits of the kibitzers but also the more tangible figures on the score.

Apparently Marooned.

In today's hand South was apparently marooned in his own hand with no way of reaching the tricks that were so plentiful in his partner's. Ingenuity contrived of the seven of spades a method of getting there.

South, Dealer.

South	West	North	East
2♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
3♠	Pass	3NT	Pass
4◇	Pass	4♡	Pass
6♠	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

After North had given a positive response and then signed off with the three notrump bid to deny spade support, he indicated the further strength of his hand over partner's four diamond bid by showing his second suit. With a nearly solid suit South immediately leaped to the Slam (in view of his lack of low cards in partner's two suits a very optimistic bid, indeed) and West, with a sure trump winner and the possibility of two tricks in diamonds, doubled.

The Play.

The opening lead was the Queen of hearts, which South won. With no small cards in either clubs or hearts, dummy's tricks appeared as far away as the moon, but South determined to shoot for it and led back the seven of spades.

Admittedly, West had a tough problem. If South had thought for a long time before making his play, probably West would have guessed right. As it was, his hasty decision proved the wrong one, for he hoped by playing equally swiftly he might convince declarer East had the King of Spades. He reasoned if declarer held either the six or deuce of spades in addition to his seven, winning the first trick with the King would be futile. Actually, however, East's holding both the six and deuce was West's only hope and he should have realized it. When West ducked North overtook his seven with dummy's eight, led the King of hearts, discarding his Ace of Clubs and then discarded all four losing diamonds on four club leads, cheerfully conceding the King of spades as his only losing trick.

For his work in apprehending the Tri-State gangsters, Lieut. Floyd A. Truscott was permitted by the District Commissioners yesterday to accept rewards totaling $1,600.

"Fine work," Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen wrote at the bottom of the order granting the permission.

Lieut. Truscott will accept a check of $100 from the Postoffice Department for the arrest of Arthur Misunas, who shot and crippled a postoffice guard in a mail robbery at Union Station on December 5, 1933. He will receive another check for $1,500 from the Postoffice Department for his work in arresting and convicting the Tri-State gang, which murdered Ewell M. Huband, a mail-truck driver, at Richmond.

On the Air Today

Washington would like to have heard the Will Rogers funeral service. All day long Thursday the 'phone rang. "When will we hear the Rogers service?" Will the Rogers service be on the radio this afternoon?"

At one time about mid-day The Post telephone operators sent word down that the incoming lines were almost completely blocked with inquiries. It seems an earnest but misinformed reporter on the West Coast included in his Rogers story, printed by The Post Thursday morning, the statement that a radio network would broadcast the service.

Although I did not check with the local offices of the networks to learn the particular reasons the pick-up was not made, it is safe to say the service was not broadcast for a variety of reasons. The family's wishes would be considered first; previous commitments, commercial programs and a sane consideration of the cost would follow in close order. I do believe, however, that neither network anticipated the public at large would be so enormously interested.

Alvin Karpis apparently didn't frighten Mr. Hoover's Bureau of Investigation very much with that recent threat. "G-Men" tonight (WMAL, at 8) present the story of the Barker gang which figured in the Bremer kidnaping. Even Ma Barker is expected to figure in the dramatization. Won't Mr. Karpis be irritated if he listens in.

Although Jack Benny will not be back with his weekly half-hour until September 29, he will cut a few capers at 5 this afternoon, WMAL, when his new picture is previewed in Hollywood—"Broadway Melody of 1936," with Frances Langford. Also on the program: Harry Stockwell, Robert Taylor, Sid Silvers and Una Merkel.

• • • •

Fred Astaire will sing three tunes identified with his movie and stage appearance, WRC, at 7: "Needle in a Haystack," "Flying Down to Rio" and "Night and Day." The "Hit Parade" song-of-the-week probably will turn out to be "East of the Sun" with a few votes yet to be counted.

• • • •

A new informal show, "Club Columbia," will be inaugurated tonight, WJSV, at 7—a mythical equivalent of a night spot frequented by radio stars in their moments of relaxation. B. Charles-Dean will be master of ceremonies, wandering about from one table to another with a portable mike, seeking out celebrities. Music will be under direction of Leith Stevens.

• • • •

President Roosevelt will address the Nation in general and the meeting of Young Democrats at Milwaukee in particular tonight at 9:30. It isn't necessary to name the stations; every station will be tied in . . . Army maneuvers continue today with N. B. C. and C. B. S. moving into the "front lines" to provide an accurate story of the mimic warfare.

Col. Roscoe Turner, Dolores Del Rio, Roscoe Ates and Ruby Keeler's young sister, Marjorie, are Jolson's Chateau stars, WRC, at 8:30 . . . John D. M. Hamilton, general counsel for the Republican National Committee, talks on "The Rubber Stamp Is Still With Us," WJSV, at 5 . . . Lora Kelly, of The Post staff, discusses methods of handling club publicity, auspices of District Federation of Women's Clubs, WRC, 12:30 p. m.

"Call of the Cumberlands," probably the first folk opera ever written in this country, will be presented for one hour at 3 p. m., WMAL—written by a 23-year old Kentucky mountaineer, Harrison Elliott. All the actors will be mountaineers with, for once, real mountain string music. Advance notices make it sound interesting.
